Five-Year Old Girl Found Alive
After Eight Days in N. H. Wilds

EIGHT DAYS IN WOODS

Pamela Hollingworth Rescued Shortly after Sheriff Abandons Hope

CONWAY, N. H., Oct. 6 (P)—Five-year-old Pamela Hollingworth was found tonight alive and well after wandering eight days and nights through mountain wilderness in bitter cold and driving rains, living only on brook water.

Her only clothing—a tiny sunsuit—was tattered when CCC boys and forest rangers found her, smiling and unafraid, on a trail of the White Mountain national forest.

A faint "hi, hi" attracted the searchers—just as they turned back to their camp at dusk, downhearted after another apparently futile day.

The voice led them to the little girl who, a twinkle in her eyes, said "I have been out in the rain and cold since Sunday."

"What's your name?" they asked. "Pammy," she replied.

"You are in better shape than we are," grinned Bill Matson, one of those scouring the woods tirelessly since Pamela wandered from a family picnic a week ago Sunday.

End of Mass Hunt
Thus came to a happy end New England's greatest mass hunt.

First words with her father—Joseph Hollingworth, Lowell, Mass., lumber company executive—were over a two-way radio.

He was on the verge of collapse from exhaustion after a week of seemingly hopeless hunt.

To little "Pam," however, it was dad who was lost.

"Where have you been?" she asked in wonderment.

An army jeep car brought him to a reunion with his only daughter on the narrow, winding trail 1,400 feet up on Chocoma mountain.

Tears rolled down his face when they met, "Pam" smiled.

Soviet Land and Air Forces
Report Successes on
Two Fronts

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Oct. 7 (P)—Coordinated Soviet land and air forces smashed two German motorized columns and destroyed ninety-eight Nazi tanks, the Russians announced today in acknowledging that the Nazis had wedged into the Red army lines at one point in the west.

The early-morning communique failed to say where the German tank advance was made in the western sector, but said the Red air force and tank units destroyed thirty-four Nazi tanks, twenty-two of them by air bombs.

On the southern front the official announcement said sixty-four German tanks, 130 infantry and ammunition trucks and two tanks were destroyed by Soviet airmen.

Stabbing Fighting Continues
Elsewhere along the front the Soviet announcement said stubborn fighting still raged on and in the far northern waters of the Barents sea the Red navy was credited with sinking a German troopship.

For nearly a week the defenders of Leningrad have reported daily counter-blows against the German siege lines, frequently claiming gains of one, two or three miles, and their position was represented as strong as it has ever been in the six-week-old siege.

Not only there but also at Odessa, similarly beleaguered on the Black sea, in the Ukraine, in the East before Kharkov and on the approaches to the Crimea, the Red army's positions were said to be straighter and stronger than at any time in the fifteen-week-old invasion.

Leningrad and Odessa, successfully defended, would remain important diversions for the forces of the Reich, even if the Russians never are able to sail far in counter-offensive strokes.

Thousands Killed
Leningrad's defenders, ranging from regulars to members of the People's army, have vowed that the approaches shall become "Nazi cemeteries."

Reports of Sea
Battle Continue
And Grow Apace

Four Ships Now Said To Have Been in Action
Off Brazil

MACEIO, BRAZIL, Oct. 6 (P)—Reports from scattered coastal villages today indicated the possibility that as many as four vessels may have participated in a running naval engagement off the easternmost bulge of Brazil last week and that one of the ships may have been sunk.

(There has been no confirmation of such a battle from any official source.)

The Associated Press correspondent at Maragogi, sixty miles north of here, said it was reported that wreckage from a ship was washed ashore near Porto De Pedras, twelve miles south of Maragogi.

Another report from Porto De Pedras said an empty lifeboat bearing the name "White" had been washed ashore there and this was believed here to be the one from which seventeen survivors of the sunken American-owned freighter, I. C. White, were rescued by the freighter Del Norte.

This lifeboat, still carrying a cask of biscuits, apparently was abandoned after the White's survivors were picked up and had no connection with the reported sea battle.

The stories from a string of coastal villages varied in detail, but all told of residents hearing sounds they believed to be cannon fire at sea Friday night.

Residents of Maragogi, seventy-four miles south of Recife, first reported the incident, and some of them said they saw a ship about twenty miles at sea and the distant smoke of another ship which appeared to have stopped. They were sure it was the roar of guns they heard.

U. S. Ambassador
To Russia Coming
Home for Conference

MOSCOW, Oct. 6 (P)—U. S. Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt will go to Washington soon for a consultation, it was announced tonight. He had a half-hour farewell talk with Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov this afternoon.

Walter Thurston, counselor of embassy, will remain as charge d'affaires.

Steinhardt is expected to review general Soviet-American affairs with the state department following the Moscow tri-power war supply conference.

Miami Escapes
Hurricane Damage

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 6 (P)—South Floridians who spent a Sunday hammering reaped their reward today when a tropical hurricane left this area relatively unscathed.

The small, but intense storm ripped inland from the Atlantic ocean just south of Miami, swept across the tip of the peninsula in quick time and passed out into the Gulf of Mexico to threaten shipping and cause warnings to be hoisted from Carrabelle, Fla., to Grand Isle, La.

Several houses in the northeast edge of Kansas City and in the Fairmount and Sugar Creek suburban districts were demolished. Dozens of homes and business buildings were damaged.

The dead were Mrs. Dorothy Lucas, 25, her 18-month old daughter, Diana, and an unidentified negro.

The new Arlington Methodist church was wrecked.

Panama Kicks Up a Fuss over Plan

Council Declares Registry
Will Be Cancelled if They Carry Guns

By WILLIAM B. ARDERY
WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (P)—Little Panama rose up today and threw a big monkey wrench into reported plans to arm a large number of American-owned cargo ships flying the Panamanian flag.

A decree of the cabinet council at Panama declared flatly that merchant vessels of the Central American country must not be armed, under penalty of cancellation of their Panamanian registry.

Only last month, President Roosevelt had revealed that steps already had been taken to arm some of the American-owned ships which had been transferred to Panamanian registry to escape the prohibitions of the United States neutrality act. (That act prevents the arming of American-flag cargo ships and bars them from combat zones.)

GERMAN RADIO HALTS EFFORT TO EXCHANGE MANY PRISONERS

By J. WES GALLAGHER
NEWHAVEN, England, Tuesday, Oct. 7 (P)—The lights of a merciful truce, arranged by wary radio conversations with the Nazis, flashed on at the stroke of midnight aboard two prison-exchange ships in this little channel port today, but they were as suddenly doused forty seconds later.

The historic deal for swapping British and German wounded was off again, blacked out by the same agency which had helped arrange it—the German radio.

Whether the trade was cancelled or merely postponed as it had been Saturday was not explained, but about 100 wounded Germans below decks of the hospital ships St. Julien and Dinard sighed in discouragement as they heard the news.

Trips Suddenly Cancelled
They were to have been the first of at least 1,500 men to be exchanged for 1,500 Britons, but a last minute telephone call from the war office in London snuffed out the blue and green running lights the floodlit red crosses just as the ships were ready to cast off for the Nazi-held port of Dieppe, France.

"In view of a statement made on the German wireless Monday night on the subject of repatriation, the hospital ships will not sail," said a war office statement.

It volunteered nothing further, but authoritative British sources said the following Monday night broadcast from the Breslau radio was responsible:

Germany's Position
"In its report on the exchange of British and German prisoners of war today, the BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation) was considerably in advance of the facts. So far only a part exchange has been considered."

"The German government has declared itself ready to exchange about 100 prisoners. These are on board hospital ships at Newhaven. If they are brought over, the German government has declared itself ready to return an equivalent number on the ships."

"With regard to further developments on this scheme, diplomatic negotiations are still in progress."

The British had thought the exchange was finally agreed upon in (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

7 Red Parachutists
Executed in Rumania

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY, Oct. 6 (P)—The newspaper Esti Kurir reported today that seven Soviet parachutists who landed in the Rumanian oilfields near Ploesti were executed after a death sentence by a Bucharest military court.

The dispatch said the Russians were not considered prisoners of war because they landed in civilian clothes.

Double Drive Is Launched in New Russian Campaign

Nazis Also Continue Their Furious Attacks in the South

Fuehrer's "Gigantic New Development" Is Now
Revealed

LONDON, Oct. 6 (P)—Adolf Hitler has flung two great columns at Moscow in a new and major offensive along the central and north central fronts which is slowly progressing over bitter Russian resistance, authoritative sources reported here tonight.

This double thrust was understood to be based from Roslavl, half way between Smolensk and Bryansk and about 220 miles southwest of the capital itself, and from the Valdai hills, which lie about 200 miles northwest of Moscow and about 180 miles below Leningrad.

This somewhat surprising turn of affairs on the central front, where earlier the Soviet position had seemed better than in any other theater, was reported along with word that the Nazis also were still driving forward in the south in the region of the Donets river basin of the Ukraine.

Leningrad Pressure Lower
The situation for the Leningrad defenders, however, was declared by London informants to be apparently improved.

The new and major German lunge at the Russian center, which was described here as "on a very considerable scale," was assumed to be the "gigantic new development" of which Adolf Hitler spoke in his address of last Friday to the German people.

All this suggested the beginning of one more German effort to win a quick and spectacular major triumph—a triumph thus far stubbornly denied by the Russians both before Leningrad and at besieged Odessa in the far south.

Peace Offer Rumored
Supporting the accepted theory that Hitler was most anxious for such a victory were dispatches from Cairo which stated, on the basis of information reaching here, that he was likely to make a peace offer to Britain and the United States before the year's end.

An American recently arrived in Egypt from German-held territory declared that the Fuehrer expected by that time to be able to declare that Russia had been knocked out.

As an essential part of this plan, it was added, Hitler would lose every bit of Germany's war power against the Russians.

In both British and American diplomatic quarters reports of such a German peace feeler were heard with considerable credence, although both quarters expressed the conviction that such an offer would certainly be rejected.

Reception

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6 (P)—Elaborate plans for a huge city reception for the Duke of Windsor and his duchess—returning to her home town after a 10-year absence—were dashed tonight by the duke's request that a tea be the only function.

General Henry M. Warfield, uncle of the duchess, said the duke talked with him by telephone from his ranch in Canada.

The call came only a few hours after the official reception committee held its first meeting, scheduling a luncheon, reception at city hall, and huge reception at the War Memorial.

Warfield said the duke asked that only a tea be held next Monday. (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

By The Associated Press
Fire danger mounted in Maryland forests and towns yesterday (Monday) as a burning-sun seared the parched state in ninety-degree heat in the third successive day.

After an early morning low of 77, the thermometer bounded to 95 at 2 p. m. In Baltimore to break the record for the date—90 degrees, set in 1922. The mean temperature was 74 degrees above normal, leading the weatherman to mop his brow and exclaim:

"That's very, very, very warm." Marylanders agreed heartily as they dug into storage closets for summer clothing. And the weatherman predicted no let-up in the unseasonable hot dry weather which has parched Maryland farm land, baked the ground so farmers are unable to plant winter wheat, and taken water supplies throughout the state to record lows.

May Close Schools
Walter S. Fishel, owner of the Boonsboro water system, said he would ask the Washington county board of education to close the Boonsboro school immediately because of the water shortage.

Boonsboro receives its water supply from two reservoirs, fed by two streams which are nearly dry. The reservoirs are empty. City officials expressed concern over fire danger in the town, the only available water being a third, large spring in the center of town from which residents have been hauling their water for a week.

Nearby Hagerstown reported 94-degree heat at noon—and going up. At Frederick it was 92 at noon. City officials there are considering employing a fire-protection crew which will be placed on their water-tanks in a radio-equipped truck.

This crew, they feel, could cooperate quickly with the state forest lookouts in two towers to control any fires which might break out in the tinder-dry woodlands.

Grave Danger of Fire
Mayor Lloyd C. Culler conferred with assistant State Forester Walter J. Quick last week, saying Frederick officials feared a fire, followed by rains, would send debris floating into the already low reservoirs.

Four fires were reported to the forestry department in Baltimore today. Two were in Baltimore county. A third was at Bel Air and a fourth was on South Mountain a mile east of Boonsboro. Reports were received of small, scattered fires on the Eastern Shore, near Salisbury.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (P)—Saddened by the death of the retired Justice Louis D. Brandeis, the Supreme Court reconvened today with a new chief justice and two new members to start work on a record number of cases, many of far-reaching importance.

The opening session lasted but four minutes out of respect to Brandeis but starting tomorrow the justices will begin conferences to determine which of 650 petitions for review will be granted and their decisions on the petitions will be announced next Monday.

Prime Minister Predicts
Fighting from Caspian to the Nile

By WITT HANCOCK
SIMLA, India, Oct. 6 (P)—Mock warfare on India's rugged northwestern frontier, the gateway to the west, a day ahead of schedule today with a surprise aerial "attack" made in modern style before a formal declaration of war.

As the games got under way the three-day secret session of the Indian National Defense Council opened in Simla with a message from Prime Minister Churchill stating that "during 1942 the armies of India, with their British comrades, will be fighting on a long front from the Caspian to the Nile."

"By so doing," said the Churchill message, "they will be barring the eastward progress of the war and thus keeping the horrors of Nazi invasion thousands of miles away from the plains of Hindustan."

"War Gets Under Way"
The war games, the largest air defense exercises ever undertaken in India, had been scheduled to open tomorrow, but today "enemy" planes raided vital railway stations at Lahore, Wazirabad, Lelamusa and Rawalpindi, and the "war" was on.

The games are to continue for eight days, with airplanes landing parachutists and bombing strategic points after flying over mountain passes through which the conquerors will advance.

Lindbergh Talks
Like Nazi Agent,
A. A. Berle Says

Assistant Secretary of State Points to Line
Ordered by Nazis

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (P)—Adolf A. Berle, Jr., assistant secretary of state, tonight accused Charles A. Lindbergh of "following the exact line which has been laid down in Berlin for the use of Nazi propagandists in the United States."

In an address before the Harvard Graduate School of Business at the Harvard Club here, Berle said the state department not long ago learned of some of the instructions sent out from Berlin to Nazi agents abroad.

These included, he said, instructions that "a howl was to be raised that President Roosevelt was attempting to become a dictator; that he would impose on America the kind of dictatorship that Hitler had imposed on Germany."

Jews Accused
"There was the usual suggestion," Berle added, "that this dictatorship would be a dictatorship of Jews."

He continued: "It is a matter of coincidence that somewhat later we were favored by two speeches from Mr. Lindbergh. One of them asserted that Mr. Roosevelt, assisted by a Jewish clique, was plunging us into war—although any sane person could see that (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Hopkins Rescued From Perch Alop Devil's Tower

Aviator Is Brought Down by Group of Mountain Climbers

SUNDANCE, Wyo., Oct. 6 (AP)—George Hopkins, 30, was rescued from Devil's Tower at 8:30 p. m. (MST) today.

He was taken immediately to the ranger station a half mile from the 1,280-foot volcanic spire on which he had been trapped since he parachuted to its flat top last Wednesday on a $50 bet.

Mountain climbers brought him down from his perch on the turret in about four hours.

"I want a shave and a haircut," were Hopkins' first words when he reached safety.

When he saw the crowd of thousands at the base of the tower he told a climber:

"I'd rather climb back up than face that crowd."

Find Six Dead In B-18 Bomber

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Oct. 6 (AP)—State Highway Patrolman Jack Powell radioed the Cochino county sheriff's office tonight that a ground party had reached the wreckage of the army air corps missing B-18 bomber and that all six occupants were dead.

Powell said that wreckage and bodies were strewn over the side of snow covered Agassiz peak for a distance of 150 to 200 yards.

The highway patrol car is about three miles from the wreck and messengers had to climb over rugged, trail-less terrain to make radio transmission possible.

The report was received at the sheriff's office by Deputy Dan Williams.

The plane hit the peak Thursday night while struggling through a rain and snow storm on a flight from McClelland Field, Sacramento, Calif., to Albuquerque, N. M.

AFL Plans All-Out Support of FDR's Foreign Policies

By JIM HUTCHESON

SEATTLE, Oct. 6 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor opened its sixty-first annual convention today in a wave of enthusiasm for all-out support of President Roosevelt's national defense efforts and for simultaneous planning against the possibilities of a post-war boom and economic collapse.

While pledging aid to the nation's foreign policies, Federation President William Green emphasized that labor "from every nation in the world must be accorded the privilege to sit in at the peace conference and help negotiate a world peace."

"We are determined that the regimentation of labor, involuntary servitude and forced labor shall be wiped out and the totalitarian form of government eliminated."

graveyards." The colossal toll in lives and material on both sides shows no letup.

Dispatches from Leningrad today told of "obdurate resistance" to the Germans in all sectors of that front, each successive day bringing "hundreds and thousands of new heroes."

Since the invasion started one air unit defending the city was credited with destruction of 324 German planes—276 enroute to Leningrad and forty-eight destroyed on one German airfield. An anti-aircraft detachment in one week downed nineteen German planes and, using its weapons for horizontal fire, destroyed twenty-seven tanks, six field pieces, ten mortars and almost 1,000 men, according to the Leningrad advices.

Brandeis

Evans Hughes, read a tribute to Brandeis for his "rare sagacity and wisdom" and his "prophetic vision." Previously, President Roosevelt had sent a message to the justice's widow saying that his "life in the law, both as advocate and judge, was guided by the finest attributes of mind and heart and soul."

Roberts Opens Session

The brief court session was opened by Justice Roberts, the only member of the court besides Stone not appointed by President Roosevelt. Roberts announced that Stone had been nominated chief justice and confirmed by the Senate and that he already had taken the oath.

Then Stone announced the appointments of former Attorney General F. B. Byrnes of South Carolina, who succeeds the retired Justice James C. McReynolds. They also had been sworn in previously.

The duke and duchess, the former Wallis Warfield of Baltimore, plan to arrive Saturday for a three-day visit with Warfield.

At a meeting, the reception committee turned thumbs down on spats and frock coats, shouldered a powerful lot of responsibility off upon a maitre d'hotel, and shuddered at a suggestion to bring out the 300-foot green carpet laid down when Queen Marie of Rumania came to Baltimore fifteen years ago.

With an eye upon the 90-degree temperature today, Mayor Howard W. Jackson said "they tell me the duke likes to dress informally," so the committee decided that informal attire would be the order of the day.

Double Drive Is

the eastern front, but the high command is hiding them behind the "silence" which comes before the announcement of new achievements," authorized German sources asserted tonight.

The German nation was told of "additional successes" in offensive operations on the eastern front, but the war bulletin from Adolf Hitler's headquarters gave no details and spokesmen said the dispatches were touching only the fringes of the action, leaving the main story curtailed in silence.

Called New Campaign

There were two hints of the magnitude of the high command's rigidly secret activity—Hitler's own assertion Friday that a "gigantic new development" was then forty-eight hours under way and the comment of the well-informed Dienst Aus Deutschland news commentary that it is so vast it compares with "the opening of an entirely new campaign."

(Authoritative sources in London told of a great German drive in Russia and said it may be aimed against Moscow itself. Some progress already has been made, they said.)

Development on the approaches to Leningrad apparently belonged in the category of the spokesman called the fringes of the German push.

In that region, said the day's communique, Germany's "ring of weapons" around the city held against Russian counter-thrusts of more than ordinary strength and frustrated a Soviet attempt to break through the siege line.

Three Russian Boats Sunk

A Russian effort to land troops west of Leningrad also was said to have failed and the Germans reported three Red navy speedboats sunk among islands in the Baltic sea.

Coastal artillery and all the guns of the Kronstadt fortress, the Russian island fortress on the sea approach to Leningrad, supported the landing attempt, the high command said, and troops which were landed "were wiped out or taken prisoner."

Seven full-laden ships were sunk and twenty-two tanks, including seven of "super-heavy types," were destroyed, the communique declared.

An Axis blow in the south also was reported by DNB which said the Slovak army command announced that its forces had taken 1,400 Russian prisoners in the Dnieper river area in a week.

ing armies of Alexander the Great, Darius and Tamerlane once streamed to plunder the fertile plains below.

All branches of the defense organization will participate. Blackouts will be held to accustom the civilian population to war conditions. A defense announcement said:

"The exercises will give an opportunity to the public of seeing their own army training for the security of India against aggressive action on a war scale. They will also demonstrate . . . that our troops are being prepared for the day when a vast offensive movement will be launched against the enemy."

Invasion Seems Likely

With Germany's attack on Russia, an invasion of India itself became much more of a possibility than it had been before. Although the British-Russian occupation of Iran somewhat allayed the threat, it is still considered real.

The U. S. military observer in India, Lieut. Col. W. P. Draper, will have an opportunity to observe the games.

The national defense council session here is being presided over by the viceroy, Lord Linlithgow. Also attending is the British commander in India, Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, who recently returned from important talks in London and who read the message from Churchill.

German Radio

Monday's spectacular direct negotiations by radio between the two belligerent powers.

Impasse Reached

On Saturday, with the wounded Germans already aboard ship, the exchange was postponed because the Germans insisted on repatriation of all men wounded too badly to be able to fight again, regardless of whether they had an equal number of Britons to trade.

That impasse was broken Monday when the German government slashed through diplomatic precedent to establish radio contact with Britain and the British promptly replied in the same manner.

It was then arranged that the exchange would begin today and continue for at least a week, with the two hospital ships plying a safety-lane across the embattled channel.

Filibuster over

would follow the strategy of seeking Senate approval of its amendments first.

Where foreign affairs were concerned, the administration's voting strength is proportionately much greater in the Senate than in the House and it was apparently hoped that the measure might go to the latter body carrying the prestige of a big Senate vote of approval.

If the filibuster threats which were heard today should be carried into action, however, it might be weeks or months before a Senate vote could be reached. The rules of the Senate permit unlimited debate, and it is conceded that any well-organized group of a score or so senators could keep the debate going twenty-four hours a day for an indefinite period.

Nye Hints at Filibuster

Senator Nye (R-ND) was one of those who raised the filibuster possibility.

"I do not know what is going to happen," he said, "but I know what happened to Wilson's bill. History could repeat itself."

His reference was to legislation requested in February 1917 by President Woodrow Wilson, to permit the arming of American cargo ships. A small group of senators filibustered the bill to death.

Opposition senators were expected to settle upon their strategy at a meeting scheduled for later in the week. It was apparent in advance, however, that they would be provided on the question of a filibuster. Senator Clark (D-Mo.), one of their number, told reporters he had no intention of participating in a filibuster.

Pleading guilty to a charge of exceeding the fifty mile speed limit on the Valley road Saturday, Taylor A. Dicken, Route 3, was fined $5.75 yesterday in trial magistrates court at a hearing before Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr.

Charges were preferred by Trooper P. M. Shelton of the state police.

McClellan was acquitted of a charge of drunken driving.

Wiley Ford Man Threatens To Sue City Council

Objects to Condition of Street after Water Line Is Laid

Harry L. Whitacre, of Wiley Ford, W. Va., after threatening to start election proceedings against the water line installed by the City of Cumberland on Spring street, in Wiley Ford, agreed to meet with Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer and Charles Z. Heskett, city attorney, to discuss the matter.

Whitacre contends that street has been in poor condition since the water line to the airport was installed. He also said the West Virginia State Road Commission reported it has not given the city permission to use the road as it is not part of the state system.

Want Hard Surface

Representing Yale street property owners, H. L. Sherwood and Charles E. Meister presented a 150-name petition to the council yesterday asking that the street be graded and hard surfaced. Mayor Harry Irvine pointed out the owners will have to pay the entire cost and the matter was referred to the street commissioner, engineer and attorney.

Henry S. Taylor, Charleston, W. Va., attorney, was ordered paid $800 for legal services in connection with the airport. An insolvency of $85.20 was granted on the sewer line against Charles H. Perrin, and John S. Cook was awarded a contract for repairing the Central Fire Station, at a cost of $1,665.

September collections were reported as follows: Engineer's office $389.80; swimming pool $220.35; general licenses $345.50; movie taxes $1,007.75; weights $576.84; tax office $44,677.17, of which $17,451.47 was for water rent; water office $500. There were 397 arrests and $571 collected in fines. There were 50 fire calls and an estimated loss of $7,500.

To Run Station

William G. Blough was given permission to operate a service station at 739 North Centre street and the application of the Gulf Oil Corp., to install a 1,000 gallon tank at the Armour and Company plant at 326 Commerce street was referred to the engineer, police and fire chiefs.

General balances reported are: General $156,004.44, water operating $64,251.02; general improvement bonds $101,869.65 and sewer bonds of 1931 $4,936.03.

Water consumption for the week ending Sunday was 62,510,000 gallons. The daily average was 8,944,000 gallons as compared to 6,079,000 for the same period last year. Lake Gordon is two feet, three inches below the crest and Lake Koon twenty-two feet, four inches below.

Case Against Gypsies

Dropped after They Make Restitution

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris, announced yesterday he has decided to suspend prosecution of the case against four gypsies who were charged with defrauding Miss Emma Hammersmith, Greene street, of $4,112.46 last May, and who have been held in California for several weeks.

Harris made his announcement after he has informed the gypsy band had made restitution in full to Miss Hammersmith.

The gypsies were arrested in Napa, Cal., about a month ago and since then have been held there for local authorities. Harris said it was estimated the cost of extraditing them for arraignment in the local court would amount to approximately $2,000 and all except $750 which would be contributed from state funds would have to be paid by the county.

Held under Bond

Ray C. Stallings, Jr., this city, is being held under $250 bond for action of the grand jury, charged with stealing on Sept. 21, a wrist watch valued at $40 from Paul Mooney.

Stallings waived a hearing in trial magistrates court yesterday before Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr.

British Conduct of War Opposed By France Long before Retreat

London Publication Also Sheds Light on Nazi Invasion Attempt

LONDON, Oct. 6 (AP)—Conflicts between the British and French commands in which the French were said first to have prevented British air attacks on troop concentrations in Germany and later, when Italy joined the war, an attack on Milan were brought to light in an official British historical work, "Bomber Command."

The booklet shed new light on the smashing by the RAF of preparations for a so-called German invasion attempt in mid-September of last year, after the fall of France.

The Bomber Command is credited largely with this success in 500 attacks on 3,000 self-propelled barges of 1,000,000 tons carrying capacity and another 4,000,000 tons of shipping which Germany had assembled along the "invasion coast" for the invasion thrust.

"How many men were killed and drowned and how many boats were wrecked cannot be calculated," says Bomber Command, "but one fact stands out—no invasion took place."

British Losses Heavy

The British bomber command lost forty per cent of its first line strength in the tremendous battles of France and Flanders and the French had but forty planes useful for daylight bombing in the early days of the war, the booklet disclosed.

"Tragic differences" arose between the French and British on the air tactics to be adopted, and on the night Italy declared war the British cancelled a raid on Milan "to avoid an open clash."

The astonishing thing about Hitler's "gigantic" new offensive in Russia is the almost glacial slowness with which it is developing, in striking contrast to previous Nazi blitzkrieg technique.

Hitler declared last Friday that the offensive had been in progress some forty-eight hours. Yet it was another seventy-two hours before London military onlookers discovered any definite evidence that it had been launched.

It seemed to these London experts that the heaviest initial pressure was falling on the Russian center, just south of Smolensk; and on the north central front about 200 miles northwest of Moscow. The British reports located one scene of action in the Rostov area, mid-way between Smolensk and Bryansk.

Moscow Apparent Objective

The Nazi attack in the Rostov area presumably is aimed at breaking through toward Moscow along the double-track railroad crossing the Dnieper at Rogachev. That area, within 150 miles of the German crossing of the Dnieper at Dnepropetrovsk, Rostov itself is only 300 miles or so beyond German advance lines and the pipeline and pumping or storage or refining plants along it in the Caucasus could easily be attacked by air.

So far as is known, however, no Nazi bombs have fallen on Russian oil supply facilities. It seems clear the Germans are deliberately trying to avoid injury to oil installations, hoping to seize them undamaged and convert them to their own use. If that is true, the main weight of the "gigantic" Nazi offensive sooner or later must fall eastward of the Dnieper in the south, not against Moscow.

Other Side of Argument

There is also good negative support for it. The Baku-Rostov oil pipeline is within easy range of German bombers based in the Dnieper bend area. It terminates at Nikitovka, within 150 miles of the German crossing of the Dnieper at Dnepropetrovsk. Rostov itself is only 300 miles or so beyond German advance lines and the pipeline and pumping or storage or refining plants along it in the Caucasus could easily be attacked by air.

If that is true, the main weight of the "gigantic" Nazi offensive sooner or later must fall eastward of the Dnieper in the south, not against Moscow.

Red Forces Concentrated

Without a shadow of a doubt the major strength of the Red army is concentrated within the 250 mile half-circle, from the Leningrad-Moscow railroad in the northwest to the upper reaches of the Dnieper river to the southeast. A web of railroads and highways covers this half-circle. All converge on Moscow and all are cross-connected at intervals to facilitate quick movement of Russian troops by short interior lines to points of danger. Rostov is on the southwestern perimeter of the circle.

Drives Too Fast; Pays $5 Fine

Charged by Trooper G. S. Dunlap of operating a motor vehicle at a speed greater than is reasonable on Route 40, Sunday, Earl Borror, Route 1, Flintstone, paid a fine of $5 and costs in trial magistrates court yesterday at a hearing before Magistrate Frank A. Perdev.

the war was, in fact, plunging toward us. The second speech insinuated that the president would call off the Congressional elections of 1942 and thereby make himself dictator. Naturally, no evidence was offered of this amazing yarn.

"However sincere the motives of Mr. Lindbergh may have been, I think you will agree with me that he is following the exact line which has been laid down in Berlin for the use of Nazi propagandists in the United States. This illustrates the danger of betraying one of the most precious heritages of a free people—freedom of speech—by irresponsible statements."

Parole Papers Recalled When Man Gets Surly

Samuel Lipsitz Will Not Be Given Freedom as Scheduled

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 6 (AP)—Asserting that Samuel M. Lipsitz had shown an "uncooperative attitude," Parole Director Herman Moser late today withdrew his recommendation for parole for the prisoner, sentenced to thirteen years following the kidnapping of Alvin Hendler, son of a Baltimore cream manufacturer, in 1932.

Moser said Lipsitz became surly and wouldn't work at the state penal farm when he learned that another man involved in the case had been paroled. The convict was transferred to the penitentiary.

Lipsitz, recommended for parole in August, was convicted of conspiracy to extort and assault. He has served eight years and about four months of his term.

Hendler was kidnapped by three men while leaving the home of friends in the Baltimore suburb Nov. 18, 1932.

The victim, then a 22-year-old student at Johns Hopkins University, was compelled to drive to a secluded place where he was blindfolded, transferred to another car and driven to a vacant house at Green Haven, Anne Arundel county.

Moser said young Hendler's kidnappers discussed the possibility of extorting money from L. M. Hendler, the victim's father, but did not execute the plan and drove young Hendler back to Baltimore and freed him.

THE DAILY STORY

THE ACTRESS

All He Had Was a Second-Hand Car and Brains, but That Was Enough for Ellen, Who Could Have Had Everything

By ELIZABETH HAMILTON

It was nearly six o'clock and the dinner hour crowd was beginning to stream into Zara's. Alexander Carson was sitting at a table set so that he could get a good view of those coming in the door. The ash tray in front of him was littered with half-smoked cigarettes; his long, thin fingers were nervously entwined around the stem of a cocktail glass.

Theodore Brown, the dramatic critic for the Sun, nodded to Carson from across the room and held up two fingers crossed. Carson smiled at his understanding and thanks. Ellen, Carson's 19-year-old daughter,

"Now, Dad," Ellen protested, "you've simply got to eat something, because I'm ravenous and you know how I hate to eat alone."

Carson acquiesced rather than upset Ellen by an argument, but he was a little nonplussed by her ability to eat so heartily on her big night. He himself picked unenthusiastically at the various dishes set before him, hardly cognizant of what they were, Ellen, on the other hand, had surveyed the dinner with all the hungry enthusiasm of youth and exclaimed, "Tell your dramatic critic colleagues that, despite their overhanging shadow, the condemned woman ate a hearty dinner!"

Her golden brown eyes were sparkling.

It wasn't until she had finished eating and was lingering over a second cup of coffee that she began to speak in a more serious tone. "Dad," she began, "I just wanted you to know that I understand why you had me come to New York and why you broke one of your life-long rules and asked a producer-friend to place me in his show. You were afraid I was going to marry that boy up in Ivorytown!"

"Now, Ellen," Carson tried to explain, "I simply—"

"It's all right," Ellen interrupted

WIFE PRESERVERS

When cutting buttons off old garments, string them in sets of the same sized buttons; or run them on a large safety pin, and they will be ready for future use.

"You were right, Harry and I were planning on being married soon. This summer, in fact. Everything you wrote me about his not being able to give me the things I was used to having was right. All he had really was an old rattletap car that ran on half-gasoline and half water, and a diploma from the University of Minnesota that he had earned literally by the sweat of his brow and then didn't know what to do with it after he got it. But he was an awfully nice boy, Dad. You'd have liked him, I know!"

"You're young yet, Ellen," Carson said, "too young to know what you really want. Before you met Harry you wanted to act more than anything else in the world. Now that you've got your chance to show what you can do you can't afford to throw it away. Give it a try at least."

"Oh, Dad," Ellen replied impatiently, "there comes a time in every girl's life when she's sure she is a born actress. But most of us get over that idea after a while."

"Anyway," said Carson after a slight pause, "I'm glad to see that you took my advice and came to New York."

"I took your advice because Harry thought it the best thing to do," Ellen explained quietly. "He said I should try your way to please you, and when I had proved you were wrong that would be time enough to return to Ivorytown."

Alexander Carson went back to the theater with his daughter and then went for a drive through the park to while away the hours before show time. His thoughts were a mixture of Ellen, the theater and that boy up in Ivorytown.

Mostly he concentrated on Ellen and the theater. It was very important to him that Ellen make good as an actress. The theater was life to Alexander Carson, and he wanted Ellen to share that life with him. She had been away from him, at school, long enough now. But as he watched Ellen on the stage that night Carson had a bit-

GUESS HIS INTENTIONS

TO A GREAT extent, good defense consists of figuring out what the declarer is trying to do and then devising a means of thwarting him. Duplicate is a great means of displaying this factor at its best. One declarer may play a hand badly and be set. Another may try the best play and succeed with it. That very play, however, may be thwarted at a third table by expert defense.

At all times where the contract was 4-Spades on this deal, West led the heart K and followed with the Q, which was ruffed. Two top spades dropped the trumps, and then came the variations.

Several declarers then played the diamond A and K to the fifth and sixth tricks, followed by a small diamond in the hope that the suit would break and build up the tenth trick winner on which a club could be discarded. This, of course, failed.

A more able declarer decided that West's bids of two suits made it unlikely he had three diamonds.

British Pilot Cited in Moscow

MOSCOW, Oct. 6 (AP)—British pilot Carlton Hough of York, England, has been cited as the leading ace of the RAF in Soviet Russia with three German Messerschmitt fighters to his credit.

Two other RAF pilots were reported to have downed two each.

The Better Way to Treat Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull, headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Here's Another Economy That Seems in Order

A BALTIMORE MEMBER of the state House of Delegates, Leon Rubenstein, of the Fourth city district, is renewing his efforts for a stringent corrupt practices statute. This, he believes, should be put through the anticipated special session of the General Assembly next spring. The alternative he sees is flagrant vote buying in the state election next year.

Delegate Rubenstein offered a bill of the kind in the last session but it was sidetracked in the closing legislative rush. This time he thinks the state legislative council should frame suitable legislation with his bill as the starting point and has so suggested in a letter to Thomas E. Conlon, speaker of the House and chairman of the council.

In addition to further restrictions upon the use of money in election campaigns, Rubenstein's bill called for the forfeiture of any nomination for public office won by a candidate later found to have violated the restrictions. It proposed a system by which any voter might force an audit of the financial statements filed by candidates and by which suspected violations would be tried before a jury.

A top limit on contributions by one person was set at $2,500. Contributions by a candidate would be limited to ten per cent of the annual salary of the office sought—a provision which would fix a maximum contribution of $450 for candidates for the $4,500-a-year office of governor. Solicitation of contributions from public employees would be banned.

Under Mr. Rubenstein's plan the use of money in elections would be outlawed except for the traveling expenses of candidates and their representatives, stationery, printing, advertising, communication, rent, wages of office staffs and watchers at the polls, with watchers limited to one at each polling place for primary elections and two per polling place for each political party on general election day, the watchers to be paid no more than $5.

The employment of "runners" would be prohibited. These are persons, usually with large families, paid to use their influence in behalf of a candidate. The solicitation of gifts from candidates by organizations which usually find this a fertile field during election campaigns would also be barred.

It would appear that tighter regulations of election expense moneys are in order in view of the Baltimore delegate's assertion that "some men running for governor and senator have spent more than half a million dollars in their campaigns," and that "our present election laws permit flagrant buying of votes through subterfuge." As he says, excessive expenditures of that magnitude must operate to break down the fundamentals of representative government.

It will be no easy job to frame a corrupt practices act that will do the work expected of it. For example, Delegate Rubenstein points out that the present election law, while limiting the amount a candidate may spend in his campaign, sets no restriction on the sums his supporters may expend in his behalf. Yet the delegate's bill, as noted, provides a top limit on contributions by one person at $2,500, and a hundred or a thousand separate contributions thus might easily be used.

If the Baltimore delegate or anybody else can prompt lessened expenses for the candidates for the principal offices in the state, none will be more thankful than those candidates themselves, as well as their supporters. But in view of the scandalous expenses attributed to candidates in the past and expected of them at the next election, something ought to be done about them.

A Court Term Of Deep Interest

THE PHILOSOPHY of the new federal supreme court, which will begin handing down decisions next week after the customary four-months' summer recess of the tribunal, will be watched with more than ordinary interest. This is because the court is now more New Dealish than ever, having now seven members picked by President Roosevelt and one whom he named chief justice.

More than 650 cases are pending in the court, 150 more than last year, and more are arriving daily. At several conferences this week, the jurists will determine which cases filed during the summer are to be reviewed and which will be denied review. Announcement of the decision will be made October 13 before hearing of arguments on litigation left over from the last term.

Many important issues are listed for determination at this term. The first case to be argued involves contempt-of-court convictions of Harry Bridges, west coast labor leader, and The Los Angeles Times growing out of the publication of criticism of court decisions prior to a final settlement. These controversies have been pending more than a year.

New cases involve such varied subjects as constitutionality of the federal anti-racketeering act; interpretation of the Wagner Labor act, the Wage-Hour law and the Sherman Anti-Trust statute; whether a state may require payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite to voting for a member of Congress, and whether the Hatch act regulating political activity applies to primaries as well as to general elections.

One of the problems facing the jurists is what to do about a long-pending case involving the legality of profits made by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation on eighty-six ships constructed for the government in the World War.

When the court agreed last October to review the case three members announced that they had disqualified themselves from acting on it because of some connection with it in the past. The three were Justices Stone, Roberts and Murphy. This left six justices eligible to participate, which is the quorum required by law. When the case was ready for argument, Justice McReynolds retired last Feb. 1 and the argument was postponed.

The person who was ready to argue the government's contentions that the corporation had made "unconscionable profits" was Justice Jackson, then attorney general. He is expected to disqualify himself, and this would still leave the court one shy of a quorum.

The suggestion has been made by one highly placed official that Congress might be asked to pass a law to permit a retired supreme court justice to aid in deciding the case.

Religion in Russia Still in Question

MRS. ROOSEVELT observed in her regular weekly sponsored broadcast over a national radio network that there is no great fundamental difference in the Russian form of government and other types of dictatorship government, but added a significant statement as to Russian religious opportunity.

While the Russian constitution gave opportunity for that, Mrs. Roosevelt said, it "has never evidently been put into practice generally. . . . Their constitution gives them a number of rights which are ours, in this country, but which are often only theories in Russia."

That sounds like a covering up of the inept remarks made on Russia's attitude on religion made by the president. Many others are pressing the point made by the First Lady in more strenuous language. The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, declares that it would be "a waste of very valuable time to prove again the hollow mockery involved in the pretense that religious freedom exists in Russia." He interprets remarks by S. A. Lozovsky, official Soviet press spokesman, as a final announcement that "no modification will be made in the treatment of religious liberty in Russia," adding that Lozovsky's comment "is tantamount to a scolding of President Roosevelt's hopes that true freedom of religion might be recognized in Russia."

Such a hope seems pretty far fetched in view of the Russian record in this respect. However that may be, it still seems queer why the president should have sought to emphasize the pressing need for material aid to Russia by his pronouncement, which, perhaps, would have been better left unsaid in view of the bad odor it spread. His remarks have served only to muddle that question.

The Traitor Is Never Esteemed

CONJECTURE is rife as to the fate of Lord Haw Haw, Germany's star anti-British radio commentator. The German short wave radio announced that he had been ruled from the air but that he would state his case today in a talk entitled "Why I Was Banned from the Air." Previously, Berlin denied reports that he had been banned. But the National Broadcasting Company reports having heard a broadcast either by Haw Haw himself or a reasonably satisfactory double, although it was said to have sounded like a recording.

Haw Haw, whose real name is William Joyce, is a 35-year-old former British editor with a pronounced Oxford accent and a Fascist turn of mind, who was born in New York. He has frequently boasted that he had made utterances "traitorous" to Britain.

If the fellow is in difficulties with the German bosses, it only serves to emphasize the fact that a traitor is never esteemed even by those for whom he does his dirty work.

Nothing at All

By MARSHALL MASLIN

A man felt sleepy. So he undressed, bathed, scrubbed his teeth, and went to bed. Then he couldn't sleep.

Although he had thought he was well, suddenly he felt ill. . . . His face was flushed, his head ached, and he thought he was dizzy. He got up and gargled with salt water, then returned to bed. Still he couldn't sleep. . . . His throat was dry, his mind raced wildly.

He decided to think about something else, anything else that would take his mind from his physical condition. . . . So he thought about his children, about the trouble in Europe, about football, about bridge, about his summer vacation, about a book he was reading, about politics, about taxation, about Christmas. . . . But always his mind raced back to his own physical self and how he was feeling.

In a flash he had a hunch that he was about to be seriously ill. . . . and how would he arrange his work in the office? Or would he be so sick that he wouldn't even think of that? . . . why worry about that, anyway? If a man is out, he's out, and somebody else does his work or it doesn't get done. If he's sick or if he dies, the gap fills up and he's soon forgotten. . . . The man, in the black of night, convinced himself that some terrible germ was working in him. He didn't know its name but he was SURE it was working in him at that moment. He was going to be SICK and it was going to be very tough on his family and on himself.

And then he fell asleep. And when he woke the next morning he felt FINE! His head didn't ache, his throat wasn't dry, he wasn't a bit sick.

What had it been—a nightmare or a panic? Had he dreamed all that apprehension or had his conscious self really put on that fantastic performance? . . . He didn't know, couldn't be sure even that he had gotten out of bed and gargled, never would know what had happened to him.

But he HAD thought he was sick and now he knew he hadn't been and wasn't. . . . and isn't it funny how big a baby a man can be?

Remark on Russia And Religion Is Held a Mistake

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—There is little doubt that the president's much discussed remark on freedom of religion in Russia was a mistake by Mr. Roosevelt. Even allowing for misquotation and misinterpretation, on the face of the recorded transcript it was a mistake. It was obviously intended, on the eve of congressional debate on "lease-lend" aid to Russia, to deodorize the Communist anti-religion stench in the nostrils of an American people who, from the beginning, have shown themselves willing to sacrifice anything for freedom of every man to worship in accordance with the dictates of his own conscience.

It was a mistake because too many people know that it is a prize principal of Communism that religion is an opiate—dope—that persuades people to bear with governmental tyrannies and to solace themselves with a trust in God, who, in the philosophy of Marx, Lenin and Stalin, simply does not exist.

Whole Generation Taught

A whole new generation has been reared in "Holy Russia" in a rigid education in this philosophy. Her religious shrines have been deformed. She is anti-religious in her religion. Regardless of any so-called Russian constitutional declarations—regardless of any "declaration" by Stalin for religious liberty, he couldn't reverse the principles of his own life-time, he couldn't undo in a proclamation his work on the minds of Russian youth—at least he couldn't do it effectively enough to carry conviction to any reasonable mind. Any such composition with Stalin couldn't even be as reliable as any peace-treaty of non-aggression pact with Hitler, leaving him armed with strength enough to break it whenever he desired.

Aid Practical, However

Yes, I believe that the president erred. But, I don't go in from that belief to a conclusion that we shouldn't do what we could to help Russia keep Hitler engaged on an eastern front, thrusting away from our direction and losing strength as rapidly as possible. I think we should do that as long as we are sure that this aid goes for the purpose alone and that we are not risking a loss of our precious supplies to Hitler later to use against ourselves.

That may not be idealism, but the most realistic thing on earth is war and you can't pursue it without being realistic to the uttermost.

To be brutally frank, it is like our using Indian allies in our colonial days. We used them and so did our enemies. We used them knowing that they were treacherous allies, would destroy us in the end if they could, and were savage pagans who tortured, murdered and killed prisoners with glee and gusto. We used them because they harassed and contained our enemies and made our task easier.

Almost Parallel

The situation is almost parallel. Mr. Stalin's form of dictatorial government is as hostile to our own as is Mr. Hitler's. He also seeks world domination through a Communist revolution. He has done as much or more treacherous sabotage of mind and material in this country as Hitler and will doubtless continue or resume it at the first opportunity. But at this exact moment the two gangsters are at each other's throats and Hitler seems to be winning. It is to our interest to help Russia to resist—not for any better reason than sheer materialism.

Let's do it, but do it with our eyes open and not on any hokus-

URGES WAGE CONTROL

Scattered about Cincinnati are a number of billboards urging Americans to go to church. The same message is also being repeated on the radio and in the newspapers. It marks something new in bringing religion home to the people. Certainly it is conducive to thought.

This campaign, if it may be called a campaign, is sponsored by the Presbyterian Church of the United States, but its appeal is directed at all denominations and religions. The point is to recall to Americans that their country was founded by settlers seeking the right to worship as they please and that freedom of worship is one of the priceless heritages our forefathers have left us. It is a fact which we are apt to overlook.

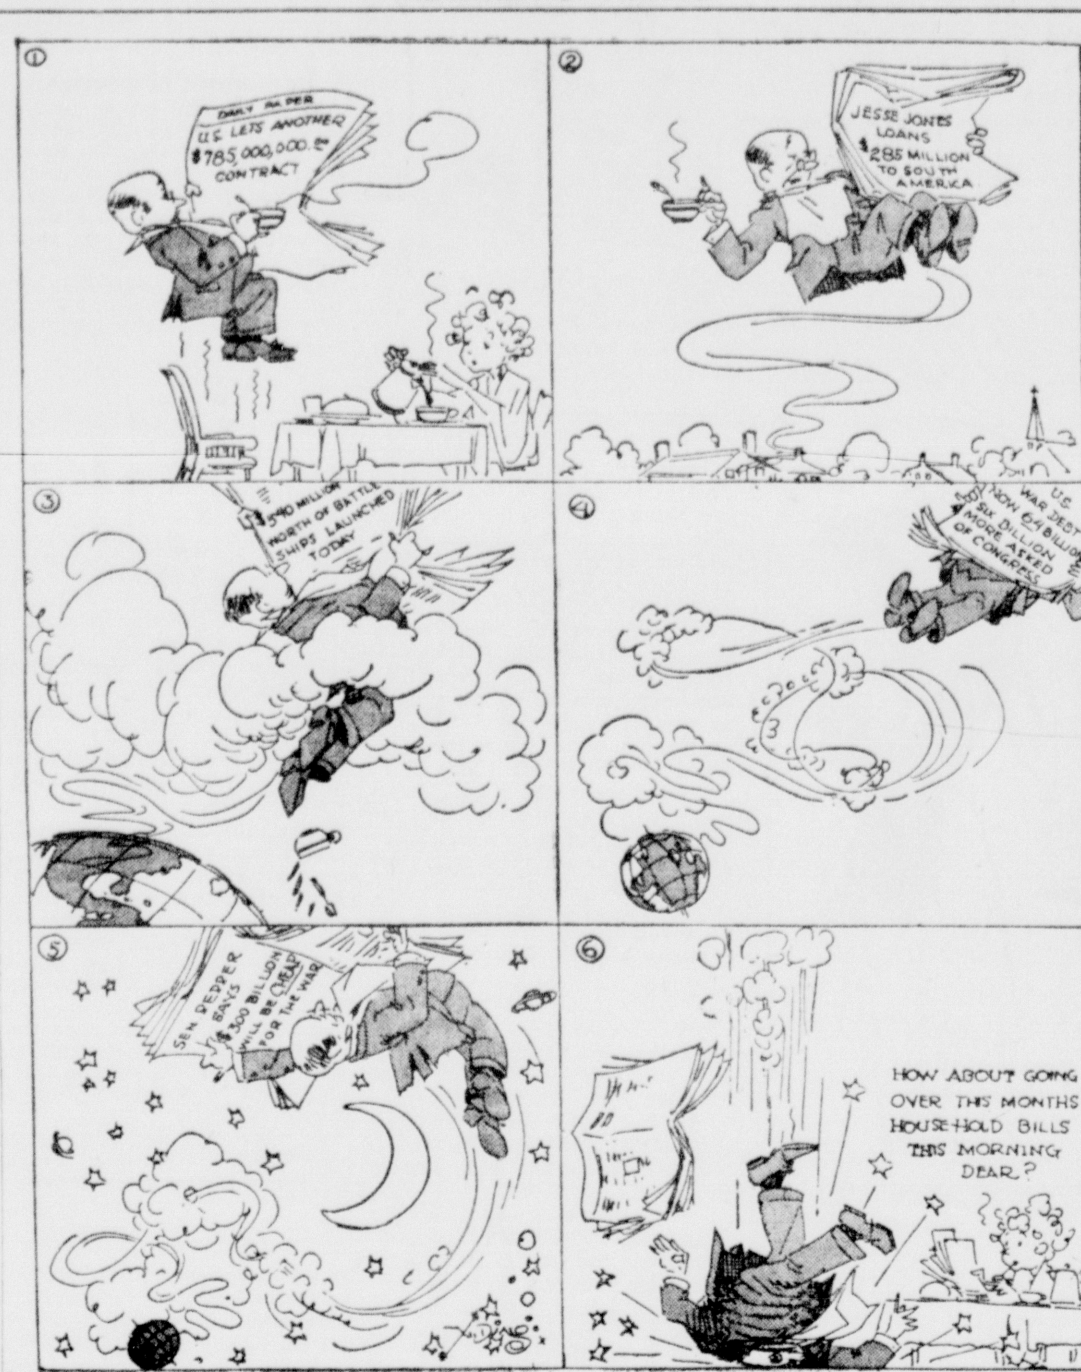

Today, more than ever, the church, the meeting house and the synagogue are necessary. Aside from the spiritual uplift which they offer, they teach valuable lessons of practical living. America's houses of worship furnish each week examples of democracy and the democratic ideal in action. In a civilization which finds itself beset by evil forces, they continue to be the greatest force for good. It seems strange that Americans should have to be urged to enjoy one of the most elemental of all their rights.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson appears before the House Banking and Currency committee and urges Congress to set up wage control as part of the federal price fixing program. He declared "only through price controls can we be assured of timely and adequate production to meet military needs."

THE REALM OF FINANCE

Amazing Conversion of Stalin Is Not Spiritual, but Practical, Sullivan Says

Focus about Mr. Stalin's religious or democratic regeneration. Comrade Stalin, like many another when in trouble, has turned to religion. The conversion is not strictly spiritual. Indeed it is not spiritual at all—it is for the worldly and practical purpose of getting help in the war. He wants the Poles to fight for him, whom formerly he oppressed ruthlessly. So now he promises the Poles freedom of religion—he is going to set up in Moscow a Polish Catholic church, and also a Polish Jewish synagogue.

But that is only the beginning of Stalin's ventures into religion. There is something bigger afoot.

Stalin wants the Congress of the United States to let him have some of that five billion lease-lend appropriation now pending. He is told that Congress is a little cold toward him and Communism, because of his past hostility to religion. So, we are told, Stalin is going to grant freedom of religion to everybody throughout all Russia.

Here's more on America's undesirable accident record: The National Safety Council's latest edition of Accident Facts, covering 1940, casts doubt on the ability of people to safeguard themselves in their automobiles. We hear so much about automobile mishaps we scarcely note the accumulation of those in the home. The council's statistics show:

A total of 33,000 persons were killed in home accidents.

Another 140,000 suffered some degree of permanent disability.

And 470,000 persons suffered some degree of temporary disability.

The foregoing covers only fatalities and the more serious injuries. The council report estimates there were anywhere from ten to twenty minor cases—bruises, bumps and lacerations. Only a hair's breadth may have separated the victims from serious injury or death.

What are the contributing causes? The council puts them this way:

Poor judgment, to the extent of twenty-four percent of cases reported.

Carelessness—poor housekeeping in the part of the home where the accident occurred; some object left on a stairway for another to fall over, etc. These were responsible for eighteen per cent. And so it goes. The human element has failed to function as it should.

Scattered about Cincinnati are a number of billboards urging Americans to go to church. The same message is also being repeated on the radio and in the newspapers. It marks something new in bringing religion home to the people. Certainly it is conducive to thought.

This campaign, if it may be called a campaign, is sponsored by the Presbyterian Church of the United States, but its appeal is directed at all denominations and religions. The point is to recall to Americans that their country was founded by settlers seeking the right to worship as they please and that freedom of worship is one of the priceless heritages our forefathers have left us. It is a fact which we are apt to overlook.

America's houses of worship furnish each week examples of democracy and the democratic ideal in action. In a civilization which finds itself beset by evil forces, they continue to be the greatest force for good. It seems strange that Americans should have to be urged to enjoy one of the most elemental of all their rights.

Stalin recanting that, and solemnly chanting, in his new-found faith, "I have done those things I ought not to have done." Stalin in sackcloth and ashes meekly intoning the Latin "Mea culpa," I have sinned. Or perhaps as the Japs would say, "Excuse it, please." That will be a sight for the world to behold, for history to record.

And Stalin will have to recant words of his own often and voluminously repeated. I print some. Reading them, American will need to understand the special Communist meaning of certain words. In the Communist idiom, the term "religious prejudice" mean prejudice in favor of religion—that is, religion itself, and "reactionary" is the word for anyone not a Communist—"reactionary" means merely non-Communist. "Liquidation" means extermination, often extermination by a firing squad.

Suppression Boasted

With this understanding of the Communist lexicon, read from Stalin's address to an American labor delegation, September 9, 1937:

"The (Communist) party cannot be neutral toward religion and it does conduct anti-religious propaganda . . .

"We carry on and will continue to carry on, propaganda against religious prejudices . . . because this is one of the most important means of undermining the influence of the reactionary clergy . . .

"Have we suppressed the reactionary clergy? Yes, we have. The unfortunate thing is that it has not been completely liquidated. Anti-religious propaganda is a means by which the complete liquidation of the reactionary clergy must be brought about."

All that, Stalin is going to recant. He is going to drop the former Communist slogan, "Religion is the opiate of the masses." The new axiom is, "Religion is a tonic for a dictator in distress."

What does America think of all this? Most of us, I imagine, will recall, and for our future guidance warily bear in mind, an ancient verse:

"When the devil was sick, the devil a monk would be. When the devil was well, devil a monk was he."

But Don't Call Me Brother

From the Pittsburgh Press

President Roosevelt advises that we all read Article 124 of the Soviet Constitution. It says:

"In order to insure to citizens freedom of conscience, the church in the U. S. S. R. is separated from the state, and the school from the church. Freedom of religious worship and freedom of anti-religious propaganda is recognized for all citizens."

Yes, the Soviet constitution tells the Russian people they are free to worship. But it isn't healthy to get caught in the act. If they are church-goers they can't become Communist Party members—and can't get any of the responsible or lucrative jobs, or enjoy any of the privileges and perquisites of the Communist elite.

The Russian people are fighting to save their necks—which is a sufficient reason. The Communist regime never has been and never will be interested in any of the four freedoms.

A majority of Americans support our Government's policy of providing material war aid to Russia because we want to help beat Hitler and make our own necks more secure—which is a sufficient reason. Let's not pretend that there is anything sweet-smelling about the Communies. Give them guns, tanks, planes—but keep on saying: "Don't call me brother."

Too Ridiculous

Originally, I heard the prediction made, in a kind of a casual way, by an altogether irresponsible observer of the administration's emergency activities, that, somehow or other, F.D.R.'d find an excuse for getting that year's election omitted.

It struck me so ridiculous a notion that I didn't consider it worth passing along to newspaper readers, and I got scooped in consequence.

Somebody slipped the same hint to Washington Correspondent Arthur Krock, of the New York Times, and darned if he didn't remark on it in his daily column. The result is that it's quite generally discussed in capital circles.

Some say, as I thought, that there isn't the ghost of a chance of such a development. Others contend, however, that F.D.R. may it, on the ground that this is not suitable juncture at which to distract our national attention, from home defense and aiding the democracies, with a congressional election.

Motive Suspected

Most critics poo-poo the theory that the White House tenant has an anti-election program in mind, but enough of 'em guess affirmatively to attract attention. I still suspect that Brother Krock shot his story, not because he had any faith in it, but in order to give an impression that F.D.R. is dictatorially inclined and thus to make the public afraid of him.

All the same, the next time I'm given a queer hunch of that kind, I'll broadcast it, to avoid being beaten to it by another journalist.

F.D.R., up to date, hasn't anything.

The difference between being scripted for a fourth term and suppressing an election is obvious.

A fourth term would be unprecedented, certainly, but so was a third one. The third nomination was a fourth wouldn't be violative of our governmental principal, any way. Executively choking off a legislative election manifestly would be anything.

Unconstitutional

Presumably our present congress simply would hold over; I take it that Congress wouldn't literally be abolished.

Yes, if the executive branch of the government has a legislative branch that suits the executive branch, it denies the voters a chance to make any changes in the legislative or executive branches. The next step might be to call off the 1944 executive and legislative election likewise.

But, as I've previously remarked, I don't believe the story. I think it was piped up as a bit of President Roosevelt. It's Washington gossip, though. I'd have referred to it sooner if I'd imagined anyone was going to take it seriously.

Rumor Incredible That FDR Might Cancel Elections

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

That President Roosevelt might permit himself to be drafted for a fourth term doesn't seem like such an absolute impossibility, but I'll be darned if I believe the story that he's thinking up a scheme to call off 1942's congressional election.

Nevertheless, both these yarns are in circulation. The fourth nomination idea is described by Washington gossip as having the backing of a regularly organized national group headed by one Dr. O. O. Carter, of Indianapolis. It's said to plan a campaign for signers to a petition advocating F. D. R.'s conscription in 1944, to run for four more years in the White House.

Change Seen Inadvisable

The argument appears to be that it'll be out of the question for the country to change chief executives, when the time comes, if the war is still going on, and especially if it's in it. Or, if the war's over, it's asserted that we nevertheless will be in the midst of a lot of economic and political complications that'll be about as ticklish as war itself is, and that F.D.R.'ll be the only tried-and-proved helmsman competent to steer us through em.

Accounts that this movement is being incubated aren't very definitely verifiable, but they're rather circumstantial. They may be true, but there's nothing inherently impossible in 'em. Of course, it doesn't follow that F.D.R.'s giving the crusade, if any, the slightest encouragement. He must know, though, that it's being talked about, for the conversation has leaked into print a bit, and he's miffing well posted on what the press says.

The 1942 congressional surmise has seen print also.

Mercury Jumps Past 90 On Two Days; Little Relief Is Promised

Little relief from the hot and humid weather of the past two days when the mercury jumped into the ninety-degree class is forecast today by the weather man.

According to the weather report, issued late last night, the prediction is "clear and partly cloudy, continued hot and humid Tuesday and Wednesday."

The temperature soared to ninety-four degrees on Sunday and yesterday's maximum at city hall was ninety-two degrees.

Accompanying the humid weather is the continued dry spell which had its inception early in September. Since the first of September only .25 inches of rain has fallen and .03 inches has been recorded since October 1.

leading candidates won't hang around that long with other bowls pressing the issue.

The Texans are hoping to keep their conference champion hooked to the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, where they can handle over 50,000 spectators at top prices.

The Sugar Bowl, now able to accommodate around 75,000 or more, would like to get the pick of the North and South for New Orleans—Alabama, Tulane or Duke, for example, against a Fordham or a Colgate.

And Miami, with an increasing capacity, is just as keen to keep building up her big winter show.

This means the Rose Bowl committee faces claimants ready to pluck six of the best teams in the field. The Rose Bowl cut of $100,000 is a golden lure, but many teams invited to collect $50,000 or $70,000 don't care to gamble on losing the lesser amounts, which is simple enough to understand.

Who They May Be

It is entirely too early yet to have any bowl teams line up. The Western Conference and Notre Dame are out. So are Navy and the Ivy League—two years ago Cornell would have been a terrific card. But the main candidates now, apart from the Pacific Coast Conference, are Alabama, Duke, Tennessee, Tulane, Texas, Fordham, Colgate, Southern Methodist, Nebraska, and Oklahoma. To be beaten once is no bowl bar. Last season Fordham, Texas A. and M., Nebraska and Georgetown—all bowl teams—had each suffered a defeat.

Two defeats are usually the eliminating point. It isn't certain that Duke would take on a bowl visit, unless Wallace Wade changes his mind.

The two leading candidates from the North are Fordham and Colgate, which are not likely to be beaten twice, at any rate, and which are almost certain to have fine records.

Alabama and Tulane are excellent bowl prospects. They are two of the best. In the Southwest the battle is always so bitter that few teams ever finish a spotless season, no matter how good they are. The competition is so keen in that section that the job of winning them all is nearly always an impossible task.

As the season progresses bowl scouts will be rambling all over the map in the busiest campaign the game has yet known. There should be fewer unbeaten teams this fall than last season was able to show.

Minnesota still will be hard to batter down, but Stanford will be in danger more than once. Outside of the Pacific Coast Conference the crack entry from the Far West should be Santa Clara, a team that is always top flight in any roundup.—North American Newspaper Alliance.

Mary Blanco, Plaintiff, vs. Lawrence Blanco, Defendant.

No. 16,644 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of the bill of complaint in the above entitled case is to obtain a decree dissolving the plaintiff, Mary Blanco, from the defendant, Lawrence Blanco, a vinculo matrimonii, and granting to her the care and custody of her two infant children, Joseph Blanco and Manuel Blanco.

The bill states that the parties were married in Westernport on October 28, 1921, and lived together as man and wife until sometime during the year 1923. That in that year while living at Luke, Allegheny County, Maryland, the said Lawrence Blanco without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and that he has since that time refused to live with her no longer. That such desertion has been continuing since the year 1923 and is deliberate and final and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation.

It is thereupon this 22nd day of September, 1941, ordered by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Allegheny County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 25th day of October, 1941, give notice to the said absent defendant, Lawrence Blanco, of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 10th day of November, next, to show cause why he should not be decreed ought not to be passed as prayed.

True Copy: ROBERT JACKSON, Clerk.

Accepts Appointment at State Music Clubs in Hagerstown

Mrs. Frank Stuart Rowe accepted the defense chairmanship of Allegheny County at the annual fall board meeting of the Maryland Federation of Music clubs, yesterday in Hagerstown. Mrs. B. S. L. Davis, Baltimore, who had been appointed to the newly created state defense chairmanship, outlined her plans for the state and made the county appointments.

The program includes building morale through music; giving assistance when needed to army camp bands; planning and developing musical activities in communities, army, navy and manufacturing centers.

Other objects include organizing clubs in a radius of service camps; procuring phonographs, musical instruments and sheet music where needed; re-emphasizing and cultivating civic music; providing musical opportunities for men on leave and inviting them to participate in free concerts for the public and to encourage community singing of the National and state anthems.

Mrs. Joseph Byron, Hagerstown, was appointed on the advisory board.

Hagerstown and Frostburg issued invitations for the annual convention of State Federation of Music clubs. The Frostburg invitation was accepted and the Maryland Singers of the State Teachers college will be the hostess club for the convention the middle of April.

Mrs. Roland Whitehurst, state president, presided at the board meeting which was attended by delegates from all clubs of the state. The board decided to follow the defense program as outlined. The constitution and by-laws were revised to conform with the National Federation. Mrs. Martin W. Garrett, Baltimore, presented the highlights of the bi-annual convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs which she attended as delegate last June in Los Angeles, Cal.

Reports were made by the following members of the local club, Mrs. Thomas Pickering, Mrs. Richard W. Trevasik, Mrs. Henry Swearingen, Mrs. Frank Stuart Rowe, Mrs. S. L. Sykes, Mrs. Robert H. Mann and Prof. Maurice Matteson.

Clothing Specialist To Attend Meeting

Radio Premieres Tonight Will Have Music and Comedy

Leopold Stokowski Will Direct the N. B. C.
Symphony

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 — Music lovers and seekers after comedy each will have their share in the program premieres listed for the Tuesday night networks.

The music will come from the NBC symphony Orchestra which is starting its fifth consecutive season on NBC-BLUE at 9:30 p. m., a transfer from Saturday nights of former years. This year Leopold Stokowski is to be the principal conductor, having eight concerts listed. Guest conductors will be in charge otherwise, with the opener under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos, of the Minneapolis
symphony.

Still another premiere is to be Red Skelton and Company, with a comedy act, for NBC-RED at 10:30.
It replaces Tom Wallace's humor.
Also at 2:30 MBS will resume its Kentucky School of the Air series.

Burns and Allen Return

Comedy comes from George Burns and Gracie Allen whose new series is due on NBC-RED at 7:30.
What's more Paul Whiteman will supply them the music and a new singer, Jimmy Cash, a former grocery clerk, is to be on hand.

The Treasury hour, for the second in its NBC-BLUE series at 8 p. m. to include Amos 'n' Andy,
Gene Autry, Tenor Frank Parker,
Bill Stern and Harry Von Zell in addition to an hour of others.

Discussion: MBS — 10:45 a. m.,

Parents Often Put Tasks Off, Set Bad Example

Children Shouldn't Form
Habit of Avoiding Little Hardships

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

I am writing this article today because I don't want to do another job I ought to do but have been putting off for months. This I find a pleasure; that promises no satisfaction to me. In it is a drudgery poring over statistics to complete a research which could be completed in a couple of days but which has been haunting me for many moons.
A certain Harvard professor, I am told, has had a half dozen scientific studies nearly ready for publication for several years. Some of them would take but a few hours for completion.

That's nothing; some mothers reading this article have dresses which have gone wholly out of style, awaiting a few stitches here or a button there (I suppose I'm out of date concerning buttons), any of which could have been done in about ten minutes. Think of the scores of times you have condemned yourself for running away from a task, all the while scurrying about to find something else to do to justify your escape.

A Confession

And here I inflict this confession upon you because I am trying to fool myself that I am doing something useful when I really have my back toward what I actually believe to be a duty. I suppose we all are guilty of such cowardice. Nothing to boast about, to be sure, since it will not bespeak a well-trained will.

We certainly do not want our children to form the habit of so avoiding little hardships and then of fooling themselves that they are spending their time profitably all the while. The effort at escape is not so bad, perhaps, as the self-delusion. Curiously enough, we can fool ourselves into almost anything.
We first do what we want to do or what we find for a moment least distasteful or most satisfying, and then we proceed to reason with ourselves that we should have done so;

and we usually are convinced. Sometimes with a little lurking doubt we proceed to persuade those about us that our action was justified.

We are tempted often, and we often fail, in our relations to our children. We hesitate, for instance, to make a decision which concerns them; instead, we let the matter go until it works out the easy way but the way we would not have chosen had we manifested courage. Then we fool ourselves that we were not responsible. We may defend a decision which we know very well has been a wrong one, merely to escape acknowledgement of having erred. Or we may reverse a decision following a strong objection by the child, giving as our reason something we have declined ourselves to think as the real reason, when we merely lacked the spine to stand by what we had known to be right.

When our children so run away from duty let us be charitable. They probably are only imitating us.

the-Month League"

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

THERE WAS a fire blazing merrily in the hearth in the sitting room of the Fennells' suite in the hotel to which Louise had insisted Hallie return with her. The tea had been hot and heart-warming and it had been impossible to resist Louise when she said, "If you don't believe that my coming was a stroke of Fate, I do. This is no time for your famous reserve, my girl. I feel hurt that you love your oldest friend so little that you've kept all this from me. So, give!"

Hallie began by saying, "It hasn't been so bad. Lots of girls are worse off than I am. After all, Eric and I have been happy."

"Have been? I don't like that past tense."

Hallie smiled at her. "I didn't mean it that way. We're still happy, but the blush wears off the honeymoon rose. I mean that now we've settled down into being two married people who are accustomed to each other. I don't rush down the path when Eric comes home and he doesn't put his arm around me in the movies. You know how it is."

Louise's eyes went to the huge bowl of blue delphinium on the table. They'd come from Toby, arrived since she left for lunch. "Just to show you that the blondes haven't gotten me yet," Toby'd written on the card.

She said, "Yes, I know . . . but I want to know how is the financial set-up. Are you doing all right?"

"Fine!" Hallie said heartily. "I think I'm going to get a raise next month and . . ."

"I'm not interested in your raise, Hallie. Singletons being a waitress?"

"Hostess," Hallie corrected with a wry smile.

"What about Eric? What are his chances?"

A sigh escaped Hallie. "I don't know, and I guess that's my fault, too. He used to tell me what he was doing—I know he does every-thing he can—but I was always so tired. I used to fall asleep while he was talking to me. Now, I guess he's ashamed. We tactfully avoid all talk."

Louise's mouth tightened and Hallie said hurriedly:

"Oh, you mustn't judge Eric by anything I'm saying. You know, he pulls his weight."

"How?" Louise asked succinctly.

"Somebody has to take care of the house, I'm away all day. Eric does beautifully. We'd both hate to live in a shoddy way. I don't see why it's any different for a man than a woman to do things like . . . like cooking and all that. After all, it's a partnership, and if one . . ."

"Oh, keep quiet, Hallie," Louise said brusquely. "You're not just talking to hear yourself talk. You're still trying to keep face. Okay, I admire it. But you can't fool me."

"I'm not trying to fool you, Lou. I'm trying to tell you the truth. Don't you think I've thought this all out?"

"I do, but I don't think you're telling me your real conclusions. Maybe you haven't told them to yourself. I know what all your letters meant, now. All these merry, gay times you've been saying you've been having. Don't you know that you were ashamed of something?"

Hallie's cheeks grew pink.

"You've been ashamed that Eric hasn't been the husband you want us to think he is."

In a very dignified voice, Hallie said, "I can't let you say things like that, Louise. You've never liked Eric . . ."

"I like him, all right, but I don't have confidence in him. Neither have you. Well, something's got to be done about it. Toby'll get something for him, even though he doesn't really have much to do with things at this end of the company. You know how much jealousy there is in this business."

"You think he can get something in radio for Eric?"

"He can try."

Hallie felt tears sting her eyes. Louise saw them, but she pretended she didn't.

"If it's a good job, you can give up yours. How would you like to take a trip back east with us? I need you for company. Toby works late almost every night. You and I could run up to Worburn in my car and see everybody. Wouldn't you like that?"

Hallie closed her eyes. To walk down Maple street in Worburn again. To sit in Daddy's waiting room. To drive him home. She wondered if her old car still was in the garage at home. Home!

She opened her eyes. "It would be heavenly."

"Then you're going. A week from today. The trip will be our birthday present to you."

Hallie shook her head slowly. "I can't, Lou. But thank you all the same."

Louise allowed herself to show exasperation.

"What do you mean, 'can't'?"

"I can't leave Eric. I'm all he's got. He's depending on me. Do you think I could go off and have a good time, worrying about him?"

Louise, I'm the kind of a wife who darns her husband's socks and watches his diet and sees that he doesn't catch cold when he gets his feet wet."

"And he's the kind of a husband who takes to it like a duck to water. Hallie, I'm going to speak plainly to you. Utter dependence is not good for any man. And it's particularly bad for a man like Eric."

"Oh, no, you're wrong!"

"Am I? He hasn't worked for nearly a year. Why? Because he has you to depend on. Do you think it's good for a man not to take care of himself? If you weren't here, he'd have to have a job—"

It was on the tip of her tongue, bitten back, to add, "or he'd find some other girl to take care of him."

"I know that's true. But you see, Louise, I like Eric to need me. Sometimes I think that's the way he'll stay in love with me."

"You don't trust him. You're afraid he needs you only while you make his life easy."

"Maybe," Hallie said simply.

"You must want love pretty badly. I would find a situation like that intolerable."

Hallie said, "I've got to leave now. We don't have a telephone Eric will be worried if I'm not home by seven."

"Leaving without an invitation to the Fennells?" Louise asked dolefully, amazed.

"Lou, you know all about us. Toby doesn't like me. I know Toby is an old friend, but Eric wouldn't want him to know . . . to know . . ."

"I was just asking, darling. Actually, Toby would never forgive me if I didn't insist on your coming in to join us for dinner. Remember this is to be a celebration of the job Toby'll get for Eric. Wear evening clothes. I mean . . . that's all right, isn't it?"

Hallie laughed. She said, "The only decent rag I have is an evening dress, and Eric will love this. When and where?"

"Here at seven. Oh, Hallie, everything's going to be all right now!"

Eric in rented tails—the Adamsses would eat pancakes for a week—and Hallie in white satin, drinking champagne, mingling with stars at the Brown Derby. And Toby saying, "I've spoken about you to Matt Osborn at the studio. He'll fix you up, Eric."

It was incredibly wonderful! It was wonderful all that week while Louise and Hallie were together, right up to the day after Eric and Hallie put the Fennells on the train for New York.

That was the day that Eric was to see Matt Osborn. It was the morning after Matt Osborn ran his car over a cliff and broke his neck.

Hallie said to her boss, "I'd like to withdraw the notice I gave you. If you still want me to stay on the job, I want to."

Ellsworth Naylor Dies in Oakland After Long Illness

Observed Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary December 24, 1940

OAKLAND, Oct. 6—Ellsworth G. Naylor, 77, resident of Oakland since 1902, died at his home here Saturday about 6:15 o'clock. He had been in ill health for more than a year, and his condition became critical last Tuesday.

He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Naylor, and was born at Hedgesville, W. Va., January 7, 1864. He was a brother of former State Senator Alonzo D. Naylor.

Coming to Oakland in 1902 he engaged in blacksmithing and continued at his work until about six months ago. He was a member of Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias, serving as trustee for many years. In 1923 he received his twenty-fifth year medal.

He was married in 1880 to Miss Elizabeth Bolden. They observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary on December 24, 1940.

Surviving are four children, Gus Naylor, of Canton, O.; Harry Naylor, Guilford, Conn.; Mrs. Albert Benson, Terra Alta, W. Va.; and Mrs. Earl Shartz, Oakland; also three sisters and one brother, Mrs. Cora Manner, Brunswick, Mrs. May Emerson, Burr Oak, Mich.; Miss Daisy Naylor, Washington, D. C.; and A. D. Naylor, Oakland.

He was a member of the Oakland Lutheran church. Dr. A. B. Leamer, pastor, will have charge of funeral services here on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence. Interment will be in the Oakland cemetery with the Knights of Pythias.

Grantsville School Issues Booklet To Serve as Official Student Guide

Publication Includes Rules and Regulations for Student Body

GRANTSVILLE, Oct. 6—The Grantsville school is receiving numerous compliments on the attractive handbook which it has recently compiled for the benefit of its students. The purpose of the book is to serve as an official guide to students enrolling in the high school. The booklet includes a welcome to the freshmen, the names of the teaching staff and their subjects in both the high school and elementary school, rules and regulations students are expected to follow, proper use of the auditorium, showers and washrooms, library regulations, attendance regulations, a list of the various courses offered, graduation requirements, student activities such as athletics, dramatics and music, F.F.A. and home economics clubs, fire regulations and the constitution of the student cabinet, as well as a brief history of the Grantsville high school.

The school, as it is today, stands on the site of the original grade school. This was a two story structure, built about 1867 and employing four teachers. The primary grades were located on the first floor, supervised by two teachers. The advanced grades, which later developed into the high school, were situated on the second floor, and were instructed in latin, history, mathematics and science.

It was under William S. Kaufman that these grades were developed into a four year high school. In 1923 the school became a recognized state accredited high school. The first graduating class, of that year, consisted of nine pupils. Within ten years the number increased to

Garrett Road Expenditures Will Be Cut to One-quarter, Browning Says

Highways Will Be Built at Approximately $10,- 000 a Mile

Draft Board Sends 28 to Huntington

Selective Service Men Are Taken to Induction Cen- ter by Train

OAKLAND, Md., Oct. 6 (P)—Cheston H. Browning, member of the board of Garrett County Commissioners, predicted today that cost per mile of county roads construction in Garrett would be cut to approximately one-quarter of former expenditures by the return of county roads to the county commissioners.

Responsibility for construction and maintenance of county roads reverted to the commissioners last week, as provided by an act of the 1941 legislature. The State Roads Commission had directed operations since 1933.

Browning said the plan will be similar to one set up by Washington county when that county took over its own roads in 1939. He disclosed that Washington county has built forty miles of roads since that time and has acquired five crushers, five graders, five rollers and forty-two trucks.

Roads will be built in Garrett county at an approximate cost of $10,000 a mile while roads under contract formerly have cost around $40,000 a mile, he declared.

Money for the work will derive from the one and one-half cent gasoline tax which for the 1941-42 fiscal year was estimated by the State Roads Commission as $169,000. Half of this is to be used for construction of new roads and half for maintenance. Browning said State Roads Auditor W. A. Codd indicated receipts probably would reach ten per cent more than estimated.

Given responsibility for the roads, in addition to Browning, were G. Blaine Giesman, president of the board of commissioners, and Paul M. Friend. The commissioners appointed Robert W. Sheekels roads engineer, subject to the approval of the state commission.

Sheekels is a former State Roads Commission employee and a graduate of Lehigh university. He has been superintendent of forests at Meadow Mountain CCC camp for the past several years.

Teachers Elect

The Garrett County Teachers' Association has elected officers as follows: B. O. Aiken, principal of Accident school, re-elected president; Frank J. Getty, principal of Grantsville school, was named vice president; Joseph Solars, Kitzmiller, secretary; and Ervin S. Smith, Oakland, treasurer.

Mr. Aiken named Ernest Spoerlein, chairman; Barbara Ann Fogelsanger, Mrs. Merne Kloss, Louise Dillon, Margaret Kochenderfer and Mary Virginia Bolden to serve as a committee to arrange for the annual banquet.

Another committee named for the proper administration of distribution of surplus food commodities included O. P. Jones, Kitzmiller, chairman; Mrs. Lena W. Walker, East Vindex, Arthur Scrogum, Accident; Miss Josie M. Iden, Cresskill; William Grimm, Grantsville; and Mrs. Inez M. Bush, Bloomington.

The association appropriated $300 for increasing funds available to lend to young people pursuing courses in teachers' colleges whose homes are in this county, in order to meet the certification requirements for teaching in elementary schools of Maryland, the fund being known as the Franklin E. Rathbun Loan Fund. The appropriation was made in honor of the thirty years of service of Mr. Rathbun as superintendent of schools of this county.

Will Inspect Buses

Inspection of all school buses in Garrett county by a representative of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, Baltimore, will take place on October 7 and 8, according to F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools.

There will be an inspection at Oakland on Tuesday morning, October 7, from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.; at Accident on Wednesday morning, October 8, from 9 to 12 noon and at Grantsville on Wednesday afternoon from 12:30 to 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

This inspection of the buses is required by the Maryland state law, Mr. Rathbun said. Arrangements for the inspection of the equipment is in charge of John L. Fitzwater, supervisor of transportation.

Form Cooking Class

Some boys will never depend on the opposite sex for good meals—it they continue seriously with what they have started at Oakland high school.

A boys' cooking club has been organized this year under the direction of Miss Palma Lucette, home economics instructor and at a meeting they elected Carl Johnson president.

The club is meeting every two weeks and in addition to actual preparation of food the boys will study table etiquette, table service, etc.

Miss Lucette also stated that the home economics club had been reorganized with Amelia Ream as president and a games party is being planned for all students in that department.

Mr. Briner announced that the Swallow Falls Harmonettes would twenty-four and by 1940 to forty-eight. As the school grew, free transportation was granted, the first bus coming from Jennings in 1924. The number steadily increased until at the present time there are ten buses.

In 1924 the school employed four high school teachers. A special art teacher was added in 1929 and in 1939 the staff was increased to eight regular teachers and two special art teachers, twice the number employed ten years ago.

The subjects offered high school students prior to 1925 were chiefly mathematics, history and science. Agriculture and home economics were introduced in 1925. The Latin course, which was dropped in 1930 was revived in 1935. French was introduced for academic students in 1929. During the past four years, physics, several sciences and art have been added to the curricular activities.

The school library, built around a few books, now includes some 1500 volumes. The attendance records show an increase from eighty-four pupils registered in 1929 to approximately 214 at the present time.

The school is now considered the best equipped in the county. In November, 1936, the new school was built at a cost of $72,454.00.

The present playground and athletic field, situated in the rear of the building, was granted in 1931, covering approximately five acres, the field provides ample space for all students enrolled to take part in any sport or game in which they wish to participate.

Communion services were observed at the Lutheran church yesterday. As a special feature of the service an automatic announcement board for the church lawn, was dedicated. The board was a gift to the church by Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gortner and their family.

Mrs. T. C. Broadwater will serve as hostess at a meeting of the Supreme Forest Woodman Circle National Grove No. 39, which is to be held at her home Thursday evening.

A convention of members of the Woodman Circle is to be held at Hagerstown October 16. Miss Ethel Simpson, Guardian of the local group, and Mrs. Leonard C. Schaefer, District financial secretary, are among those from here who plan to attend.

The regular monthly meeting of the missionary society of the Evangelical and Reformed church which was to have been held Wednesday of this week, has been postponed until Wednesday of next week. The meeting will be held in the church social room with Mrs. Joel A. Beachy and Mrs. Forest Beachy as hostesses.

Rails and Specialties Register Small Gains; Industrials Lower

Reports of Hitler's New Drive Keep Traders Out of Market

By BERNARD S. O'HARA

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—The stock market today was another "no decision" affair so far as major trends were concerned. A few rallies and miscellaneous specialties eked out small gains while most industrial leaders felt a little in arrears.

Repressive influences which have been operating to stymie speculative proceedings were given wider leverage with reports that Hitler had begun a new full-scale offensive on the Russian fronts in an effort to bring that campaign to a quick end.

The question of how the German moves would work out made an entry on the already long list of market restraints, involving further government steps to control prices, inflation, business profits and public spending.

Affected, principally by a rather general slide in industrials, the Associated Press average of sixty stocks recorded a net decline of 1 of a point at 43.0, canceling out Saturday's advance. Transfers totaled 483,900 shares compared with 423,350 last Friday.

Closing fractions to a point or so higher were Great Northern, preferred, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Great Western preferred, J. C. Penney, Westinghouse, General Motors and Electric Power & Light preferreds. Warren Brothers preferred attained a new high for the year. Lower were Johns-Manville, Dow Chemical, Owens-Illinois, U. S. Steel, Chrysler and American Telephone.

A bit higher in an uneven curb were Aluminum Co., Bell Aircraft, Cities Service and Gulf Oil. On the offside were Sherwin Williams, and American Cyanamid. Transactions here were around 80,000 shares against 96,000 Friday.

Railroad bonds continued in active demand at steadily rising prices. Other main groups were steady but gains generally were small.

The Associated Press index of twenty rails tacked on another 3 of a point, placing the group at 63.2. In exactly one week, the rails have gained 1.8 points in this composite.

U. S. governments leaned to the upside slightly on the stock exchange but trading was extremely quiet. Individual issues showed minor strength over the counter while others idled close to Saturday's prices.

Total transactions of $8,863,500, par value, compared with $8,316,000 last Friday.

"Smiling Ghost" Sets New Kiss Record

The "kissing picture" produced at Warner Bros. to date gathers of goosy statistics declare, is "The Smiling Ghost," which opens today at the Liberty theater.

Wayne Morris, blonde Alexis Smith and brunette Brenda Marshall, exchange twenty-eight kisses. Alexis' share is twenty-one, Brenda's only seven, but Brenda gets the hero, anyway. Another player in the cast, Lee Patrick, goes kissless.

According to Harry Cody, who portrays the well-known minstrel man, Heath, of the team McIntyre and "Heath," in Warner Bros. short subject "Minstrel Days," now appearing at the Liberty. This out-of-the-ordinary feature is really an authentic slice of "the good old days," and Cody should know for he was a minstrel man during 1914 and 1915 with the J. A. Coburn Minstrels. He graduated from minstrel to musical comedy and stock, from there he entered vaudeville, where he did a single called Harry Cody, the Ukelele Jockey. Then, after a period of several years on radio, Cody graduated again—time to the screen.

Tap Dance Stepped To "Boogie" Rhythm

Boogie-woogie enthusiasts will witness the first tap dance ever written to this eight-to-the-bar rhythm in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical, "Lady Be Good," starring Eleanor Powell, Ann Sothern and Robert Young and starting tomorrow at the Maryland theater.

Miss Powell does the number in the film's finale, and dances to the music of five pianos. The number was more than three months in the composition stage.

Supporting the star trio are such well-known names as Lionel Barrymore, John Carroll, Red Skelton, Virginia O'Brien, Tom Conway, Dan Dailey, Jr., and Reginald Owen.

The new musical marks the first picture for Miss Powell since "Broadway Melody of 1940" in which she appeared with Fred Astaire. In "Lady Be Good" she introduces three novel dance routines, one of them with a trained dog.

Also an innovation is the presence of Ann Sothern in a singing role.

Betty's Shower Runs Two Days; Cost, $14,000

Betty Grable stood under a shower for two days in a scene for "A Yank in the R. A. F." which cost

CROONER VS. DANCING STAR

What with John Carroll playing a radio crooner and Eleanor Powell a girl who can even do a routine with a dancing dog, there are plenty of song and dance specialties in M-G-M's lilted new musical comedy, "Lady Be Good," opening tomorrow at the Maryland theater. Add to that Ann Sothern in her first screen singing role, and Robert Young as a writer of Broadway song hits—and you know that "Lady Be Good" has got to be good!

SCENE FROM "SMILING GHOST"

$14,000. The new film, which stars Tyrone Power, was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck for Twentieth Century-Fox.

The daily cost on this picture ran to $8,000, but Director Henry King was able to shave $2,000 from the original budget by finishing two hours earlier than schedule.

It's an important sequence in the new film, and Betty had her fill of showers after the two days' work had been completed. The strapless bathing suit, which she wears in the sequence, had to be changed four times each day in order for Betty to finish the scene.

graphed the shower from 17 different angles, getting everything from a distant shot to a close-up of Betty's face.

"That gave the censors a chance to choose what they want," he explained. "If we filmed the scene only once, it might be detected and we'd have to come back and do it over. It's cheaper to do it several ways in the first place."

Betty, who heads the featured cast of "A Yank in the R. A. F.," the new attraction slated to open tomorrow at the Strand theater, doesn't like showers.

Actor George Brent Hollywood Mystery

Gay, charming, personable George Brent is one actor about whom Hollywood knows a great deal . . . and practically nothing! A recluse, Brent has been around the film city for more than ten years and not even the producers for whom he works know his telephone number.

Currently starred with Martha Scott in Columbia's "They Dare Not Love," now at the Embassy theater, Brent learned he had been chosen for the part from his agent; one of the most desirable roles of the year, he evinced no jubilation, so far as his associates could learn. As an Austrian prince, fleeing from and fighting European terrorism, Brent has in "They Dare Not Love" a role which calls for the utmost in romance and adventure, a colorful and memorable part.

His working companions—he has few close friends—know he has a home overlooking beautiful San Fernando Valley. Few have ever visited him; Hollywood has reported, but without verification, that Garbo frequently was his dinner guest. It has also been rumored, also without verification, that Brent likes to dine in quiet restaurants, where the lighting is bad and the food is good.

When the United States of America were only thirteen states the stars were arranged in a circle on the national flag—for eternity.

Visual Defects in Children May Be Revealed by Study of Their Behavior

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A teacher reported to his mother that Ralph appeared to be using his right eye exclusively when looking at nearby objects. An examination by an oculist showed that Ralph had but little vision in the left eye, and further that it was not a recent condition.

The visual defect of the left eye was corrected, but then it was necessary to encourage him to use the left eye, and the right eye was covered by a patch for school periods. When vision returned to the left eye, the two eyes did not work together and for long hours Ralph had to practice co-ordination.

Important Savings

The point is that if Ralph's parents and his teacher the year before had recognized his visual defect, a great deal of time and effort would have been saved, with which is more important, a better prospect of complete visual restoration.

Children do not tell you of their visual difficulties, because they are not aware that they exist. So we have to detect them by the behavior of the child.

A child of six years with normal vision for his years has an eye that is well adapted for seeing objects twenty feet away. But in any group of children there will be found some who can not get a clear image of objects that far away. And there are some who get blurred images of objects no matter how far away they are. The power of fusion should be developed at six years, but it isn't always. Likewise the perception of depth.

To detect these difficulties the parent or teacher must notice behavior. When a child likes to throw a ball or roll it across a floor, but makes no effort to catch it when thrown to him from a distance his vision should be examined. When a group on the playground excitedly watch an airplane, and there is one child who appears puzzled as to what all the fuss is about, he too should have his eyes looked at.

Show Blurred Vision

Have you watched a child who is playing with a small wagon stop occasionally as if to brush away a fly from his eyes? Have you noted the same child with a group of others hanging over a fence to watch a passing train? Have you observed a tenseness in his body, a puckering of the face not apparent in the others?

These and many other actions testify to blurred vision either at a distance or close at hand.

Questions and Answers

J. C. R.—Is it possible high blood pressure is hereditary? If a person in the seventies has a stroke is there a family tendency to high blood pressure in others?

Answer: There is a definite family tendency to high blood pressure, but that does not mean that if one person in a family has a stroke, others will have one.

Yankees Win Series with 3 to 1 Victory

Bonham Defeats Dodgers' Wyatt In Hectic Clash

Two Teams Fight Umpires and Each Other at Every Turn

By JUDSON BAILEY

EBBETS FIELD, Brooklyn, Oct. 6 (AP)—The almost invincible New York Yankees rolled to their fifth world championship in six years today by browbeating the Brooklyn Dodgers 3 to 1 in the fifth and most turbulent tussle of the World Series.

The two teams fought the umpires and each other at every turn in one long continual wrangle and even though the Dodgers were soundly whipped by the four-hit hurling of big Ernie Bonham, it was the kind of a wild and reckless show that the Brooklyn Bums had been expected to provide earlier in the series.

It gave the 34,072 fans, biggest turnout of the three games in Brooklyn, a chance to exercise their famed vocal chords.

Whitlow Wyatt, the lean, bald Georgian who had stopped the Yankees in the second game for their only loss of the series, threw a couple of high inside pitches to Joe DiMaggio that resembled "dusters" by coincidence or otherwise and the two rival heroes almost started a free for all on the pitchers' mound after DiMaggio's third turn at bat.

Every player of both teams rushed into the argument and the slightest spark might have set off an explosion.

Wyatt earlier had been stirred to violent protest by the balls and strike judgment of Umpire Bill McGowan of the American League, who worked behind the plate. Once when a walk was called for Joe Gordon, Wyatt threw his glove on the ground, the ball in the air and stamped and fumed around the plate and ended up by kicking a deep hole in the mound.

Two Fires in Park

The managers and coaches of both teams joined in the arguments with the umpires and there were two fires in the park during the game, to add to the confusion. One of these was on the roof back of a temporary press box and the other was a piece of bunting hanging on the railing of the second deck of the leftfield stands. It blazed up like a giant torch and fell downward, barely missing spectators in the boxes below.

Through all of these stormy scenes and the excitement of the fans, old, white-haired Commissioner K. M. Landis just sat in stony silence, his broad-brimmed felt hat pulled low over his shaggy forehead and his chin resting on the railing in front of his box.

The fun and fighting was largely a sideshow for the more sane observers, anyway, for the Yankees took the lead and held it from the second stanza on as Bonham pitched a masterful game.

They were out to get, and did get, their eighth championship in the eight World Series they have reached since 1927. Over that stretch they captured thirty-two out of thirty-six games and they were just about as unbeatable today as they ever were.

Wyatt was wild at the start, walking five men in the first four innings and the nervousness of Catcher Mickey Owen, whose failure to hold a third strike on Tom Henrich in the ninth inning yesterday cost Brooklyn a victory, was no help to the National League act.

Henrich Clouts Homer

In the second inning he had a full count of 3 and 2 on Charley Keller and the slugger tipped a foul third strike which Owen was unable to hold. Then Wyatt served a wide ball which Owen let get through him and Keller not only got to first base, but made a gesture at turning toward second.

Bill Dickey followed with a ringing single to right and Keller slid into third. Then with a one and one count on Gordon, Wyatt sailed a wild pitch high over Owen's outstretched glove and Keller loped home while Dickey ran to second. Gordon came through, then, with a single off Second Baseman Pete Coscarart's glove and as the ball rolled on into rightfield, Dickey scored.

This was all the margin that Bonham needed, but Henrich hammered a home run over the forty-foot fence in rightfield in the first pitch given him in the fifth inning. That was just for good measure and afterward the Yanks never bothered Wyatt—except with their continuous bench jockeying.

Wyatt himself set off the rally that brought Brooklyn its only run in the third inning. He opened with a hard double into the leftfield corner. After Dixie Walker had fled out, Low Riggs batted a low liner that struck Bonham on the right leg and caromed toward the third base line for a single putting Wyatt on third. The pitcher raved home a few minutes later after Pete Reiser had fled to right.

Except for a tremendous triple by Reiser after two were out in the first inning, this was the only real threat the Dodgers made all afternoon.

Wyatt Fans Nine

Bonham fanned Dolph Camilli to end Brooklyn's rally in the third and he didn't give another hit until the eighth, when Walker waited a single into right.

It was the first appearance the 220-pound right-hander called "Tiny" (Continued on Page 13, Col. 1)

Play-by-Play Account of Fifth And Final World Series Game

FIRST INNING

Yankees—After working the count to two balls and one strike, Sturm opened with a single to left center and now has hit safely in every game of the series. Rolfe grounded to Reese who threw to Coscarart forcing Sturm, but the relay to Camilli was slow and wide preventing a double play. Henrich, who had struck out yesterday for what would have been the final out of the ball game except that Owen failed to catch the ball, waited out a base on balls and Owen missed the fourth ball which rolled into the Yankee dugout almost duplicating the dramatic situation yesterday. DiMaggio fanned and Owen threw to Riggs to catch Rolfe sliding into third for a double play. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Dodgers—Walker fled to Keller who made a running catch near the left field foul line. On the first pitch Riggs tipped the ball foul and it struck Dickey, who fell to the ground in obvious pain. He apparently had been hit in the groin. After laying on the ground a few minutes, Dickey was helped to his feet by his teammates, donned his mask and play was resumed. Riggs shot a hot grounder to Gordon and was thrown out. After getting the count to two and two, Reiser tripled against the wall in front of the centerfield bleachers, running into third standing up. Camilli raised a high fly to Rizzuto who took it almost on the foul line in the grass behind third base. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

SECOND INNING

Yankees—Keller drew a walk, the ball again getting away from Owen and rolling several yards back of the plate. Dickey singled sharply along the ground into right center and Keller slid safely into third. With the count one and one on Gordon, Wyatt made a wild pitch far over Owen's outstretched glove and Keller easily scored while Dickey went to second. Gordon drove a single off Coscarart's glove and Dickey scored as the ball continued into deep right. Rizzuto bounced the first pitch to Riggs who tossed to Coscarart forcing Gordon. Bonham struck out. Sturm bunted toward third base and was thrown out to Riggs to Camilli. Two runs, two hits, no errors, one left.

Dodgers—After getting three straight balls, Medwick fouled off three pitches and finally walked. Reese fled high to DiMaggio. Owen received another tremendous ovation from the crowd as he came to bat. With the count three balls and one strike on Owen, Bonham gave him what looked like a high pitch and Owen ran halfway to first before the umpire waved him back and informed him it was a strike. Manager Durocher protested but Owen returned to the box and raised a high fly to Keller. Coscarart bounced to Bonham who threw to Sturm for the out. No runs, no hits, no errors, one left.

THIRD INNING

Yankees—Rolfe walked on five pitches. Wyatt walked behind the plate to protest to Umpire McGowan on the called ball and was joined by Durocher. Henrich fled deep to Reiser. DiMaggio fanned on four pitches for his second straight strikeout. Keller grounded to Coscarart. No runs, no hits, no errors, one left.

Dodgers—Wyatt lined a double into the left field corner. Walker lined to DiMaggio. Wyatt holding second. After taking one strike, Riggs belted a liner that struck Bonham on the right leg below the knee and caromed off toward the third base line for a single, Wyatt reaching third. On the first pitch, Reiser drove a high fly which Henrich took a few feet from the scoreboard in right field, Wyatt scoring after the catch. After getting the count to three and two, Camilli struck out. One run, two hits, no errors, one left.

FOURTH INNING

Yankees—Dickey knocked the first pitch back of Wyatt, the ball hitting him on the shins, but he picked it up and threw to Camilli for the out. After getting the count to three and two Gordon walked, and Wyatt came running in from the mound waving his glove and shouting in protest. In a heated argument with Umpire McGowan, Wyatt threw his glove on the ground and stamped and yelled.

Durocher joined in the dispute, kicked the dirt and gestured with his arms while standing chin to chin with the umpire. After several minutes of debate Durocher returned to the dugout. As Wyatt walked back to the mound, he threw the ball high in the air and let it lie on the dirt. Then he started digging a hole in the mound by kicking his cleated right foot. Pinally he picked up the ball and started to pitch. He threw three straight balls to Rizzuto before the umpire called a strike. Rizzuto walked on the next pitch. When Bonham, after taking one strike, tried to bunt and checked himself as the ball went wide, McGowan first appeared to signal a ball and then waved a strike. This brought Manager McCarthy running from the Yankee dugout and also Coach Art Fletcher from the third base coaching box to make a brief protest. Bonham fanned on the next pitch. After getting the count to two and two Sturm grounded out to Camilli unassisted. No runs, no hits, no errors, two left.

Dodgers—As the Yankees took the field, Fletcher came up to the plate again and talked to the umpire and then retired to the dugout. On the second pitch Medwick lined to DiMaggio in left center. Reese took one strike and then smashed a liner which Keller caught on the run in left center. Owen lifted a high foul to Rolfe. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

FIFTH INNING

Yankees—Rolfe knocked a roller to Camilli back of first and he threw to Wyatt for the putout. Henrich picked out the first pitch and shot a home run over the right field fence, forty feet high and 300 feet from the plate. It was his first of the series. DiMaggio drove a high fly to Reiser in deep center. As he headed back to the dugout he changed heated words with Wyatt, who on his previous time at bat had thrown a high inside pitch which made DiMaggio drop almost to the dirt. The two started for each other and almost every member of the two teams and the umpires raced to keep them apart. Peace was restored and the field cleared for resumption of the game. Keller struck out. One run, one hit, no errors, none left.

Dodgers—The crowd booted the Yankees as they took the field. Coscarart raised a high fly to DiMaggio in left center and the crowd booted and hooted as he caught it. The jeers turned to cheers as Wyatt came to bat. Wyatt fouled off a ball back into the stands, and then fled to DiMaggio. Walker was passed on four pitches. Riggs raised a high foul Rolfe came in to take in front of the Yankee dugout. No runs, no hits, no errors, one left.

SIXTH INNING

Yankees—Dickey grounded to Reese who made a bad throw pulling Camilli off the bag for an error. Gordon smashed a hot grounder to Reese who started a double play. Reese to Coscarart to Camilli. Rizzuto lined a single to left. Bonham struck out for the third straight time. No runs, one hit, one error, one left.

Dodgers—On the first pitch Reiser almost knocked Gordon down with a smashing grounder but the Yanks' great second sacker threw him out. After looking at one ball, Camilli raised a high fly to Keller. Medwick slapped the first pitch back to Rizzuto and was thrown out. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

SEVENTH INNING

Yankees—Sturm topped a weak

Larry MacPhail Won't Concede Cards 1942 Flag

Brain of Brooklyn Denies Flatbushers Are Worn-Out Club

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—Most of the critics are awarding next year's National League pennant to the St. Louis Cardinals in advance. They have forgotten that this can only be done over the dead body of Leland Stanford MacPhail.

And while Mr. MacPhail's dead body is available for parties and select entertainments in Brooklyn, the patriotic tycoon absolutely refuses to lend it out for pennant-winning ceremonies by a rival ball club.

Too early to talk about next year's baseball? It's never too early for Mr. MacPhail to talk about anything.

No More 21-Year Lapse

"So the Cards are gonna win the pennant," said the Brain of Brooklyn. "The very thought caused his face to turn a warm carnation hue, matching his shirt and harmonizing with his natty neckwear. 'And our club is gonna roll over and play dead, huh?'"

"What I hear about the Cardinals paralyzes me with fear. They are not only gonna win next year, they are gonna win every year for the next three years. Their young players are terrific. Whereas we are a bunch of worn-out bums, who were lucky to squeeze through this season. This was our last gasp. The future belongs to St. Louis."

"Listen, did we look like a worn-out ball club in the World Series? We fought every inch of the way, and half the time we were outplaying the best team in the world. Yeah, I mean the Yankees. They are supposed to be the best team in the world. What does that make us? Although we lost, you can't say we did bad."

"Our organization is not gonna stop at giving Brooklyn one pennant every twenty-one years. This town deserves a full share of flag-winners. We've been building toward a team that will be up at the top or near the top consistently, not just once in a while."

"The chieftain drew himself to his full height. Then he let himself down again, since he prefers to expostulate from a crouch. 'The Cards, I admit, are good,' he said. 'Nobody has to tell me about their system. I was in it. I still keep pretty well informed. I know what they got now and what they got coming up. Nice collection. Any club in the business could use one or two of those left-handed pitchers of theirs. But on the whole, their lineup and their prospects for the next few years don't stagger me. Good, that's all. Not great. They haven't showed me a new Terry Moore, or a new John Mize, or a good third baseman, or a real right-handed hitter.'

Brooklyn's Budding Stars

"Need I remind you," continued L. S. MacPhail, flagging down a couple of potential questioners and whisking through a semi-count, "that our Double-A club, the Montreats, licked Newark, the big Yankee farm, in the play-offs in the International League and played the pants off Columbus, the Cardinal farm, in the Little World Series? Nope. I guess I need not remind you, though it would be a pleasure."

"We are well fixed in other spots besides Montreal, though the organization is still building. We have players coming up, too. At least three of those Montreal pitchers and chasers are being eyed very covetously by certain business rivals of mine I could mention."

"But let's take a look at the team we got in Brooklyn right now, the team that beat the Cards fair and square and knocked 'em off two out of three in their own ball yard when it counted. We got half a dozen young players in key positions that are better than anything the rest of our league can show."

"Camilli is in his prime as a player. Reiser, Reese, Owen, Higbe, Casey, they don't come any better. I don't promise we'll take the field with exactly the same lineup next year. In fact, I can promise we won't. We'd be suckers to play the same hand when we can improve it. But the nucleus is there, more than just a nucleus, and I wish somebody would bet me that the Dodgers of 1942 won't be as good a blend of youth and hustle and savvy as anything in the league."

So saying, L. Stanford MacPhail rose from his chair like a startled pheasant and disappeared from view, still calling on heaven to witness his good faith toward the people of Brooklyn. If heaven won't testify willingly, MacPhail will send out subpoenas. —North American Newspaper Alliance.

Parsons High Gridman Breaks Bone in Foot

PARSONS, W. Va., Oct. 6.—The Parsons high Panthers, sharing the Potomac Valley Conference lead, will be crippled by injuries when they take the field against Thomas here Friday in a conference clash.

Three holdovers, Wallace Simmons, Serafin and Heppner, and on the injured list Simmons, fullback, received a right foot bone fracture and will be lost for the season while the other two are nursing knee injuries.

Martin Offers Few Highlights Of World Series

Dodgers Convinced Everything Happens in and to Brooklyn

By WHITNEY MARTIN

EBBETS FIELD, BROOKLYN, Oct. 6—(The Special News Service)—The plaintive bleat of "wait till next year" again echoed along the banks of the Gowanus tonight as the Dodgers fans finally were convinced that everything not only happens in Brooklyn, but to Brooklyn.

For what happened to their bums shouldn't happen to a dog, and if the breaks had just bent a little their way it would be over the river to the Yankee stadium tomorrow, instead of just over.

And before sticking the 1941 Dodger nightmare in mothballs to be unwrapped piece by piece on cold winter nights, a few highlights, and lowlights might be exposed while they're still fresh.

These might include:

BEST ALL-AROUND PLAYER—Joe Gordon.

GOAT—Name your own. We won't name Mickey Owen. He was simply the most unfortunate. He played great ball except for one lapse.

SENTIMENTAL HERO—Pat Freddy Fitzsimmons, the pitching antique who had the Yanks tamed when he was kneed by a line drive.

BIGGEST BUST—Dolph Camilli. MOST TIMELY HIT—Phil Rizzuto's single in the sixth inning of the last game with two out, and Ernie Bonham up next.

BEST CATCH—Joe Medwick's spear of Joe DiMaggio's drive in the first game. Runner-up: any one of half a dozen by Gordon.

LOUDEST NOISE—Leo Durocher squawking over DiMaggio's hit down the third base line in the fourth game.

LOUDEST SILENCE—The center field bleachers when Pete Reiser fanned in the eighth inning of the final game. The Dodgers died right there.

MOST UNFAIR—The booing of DiMaggio when he fanned, and after his run-in with Whit Wyatt.

MADDEST—Wyatt when the umpire made it ball four on what Wyatt thought was a perfect strike.

BIGGEST MISTAKE—Hugh Casey giving Charley Keller a hitable ball after the count was nothing and two in the ninth inning of the fourth game.

PASTEST PLAY—Durocher getting from the dugout to the mound when DiMaggio and Wyatt seemed intent on doing each other great bodily harm.

MOST BEWILDERING MOVE—Durocher starting Curt Davis in the first game instead of Wyatt.

EASIEST PREDICTION—How the Yankees would handle Kirby Higbe's last one.

LUCKIEST AMERICAN LEAGUE CLUB—Yankees.

LUCKIEST NATIONAL LEAGUE CLUB—Cardinals, who didn't have to meet them.

MOST PERTINENT REMARK—Fan, seeing Joe McCarthy going on field before final game: "Hey, there, Lucky Guy."

BIGGEST HEADACHE—On every block in Brooklyn tonight.

HARDEST HIT—The Dodger fans.

LONGEST TO BE REMEMBERED—Not even close. It's Mickey's muff which gave the Yanks their chance to slug after the bell ending the round.

MOST VIVID IMPRESSION—That the better team won, and over all it again if they started all over tomorrow.

Beall's Booters Drop 6-5 Battle

FROSTBURG, Oct. 6—Coach Eddie Finzel's Beall high soccer team, which lost a 6-5 battle to Williamsport high here last week, will play two games this week, meeting Grantsville here tomorrow and opposing Oakland at Frostburg, Friday.

Williamsport took a 4-0 lead in the first period on goals by Harsh and Bowman while in the third stanza, Bowser of the visitors booted home a score after Beall had tallied on a penalty kick by Ray Middleton.

Beall counted twice in the last quarter on goals by Day and Ritchie but was unable to overcome the one-point lead held by Williamsport in the waning minutes. Zimmerman and Mason of Williamsport, and Knierniel and Bittner of Beall played outstanding games. The lineups:

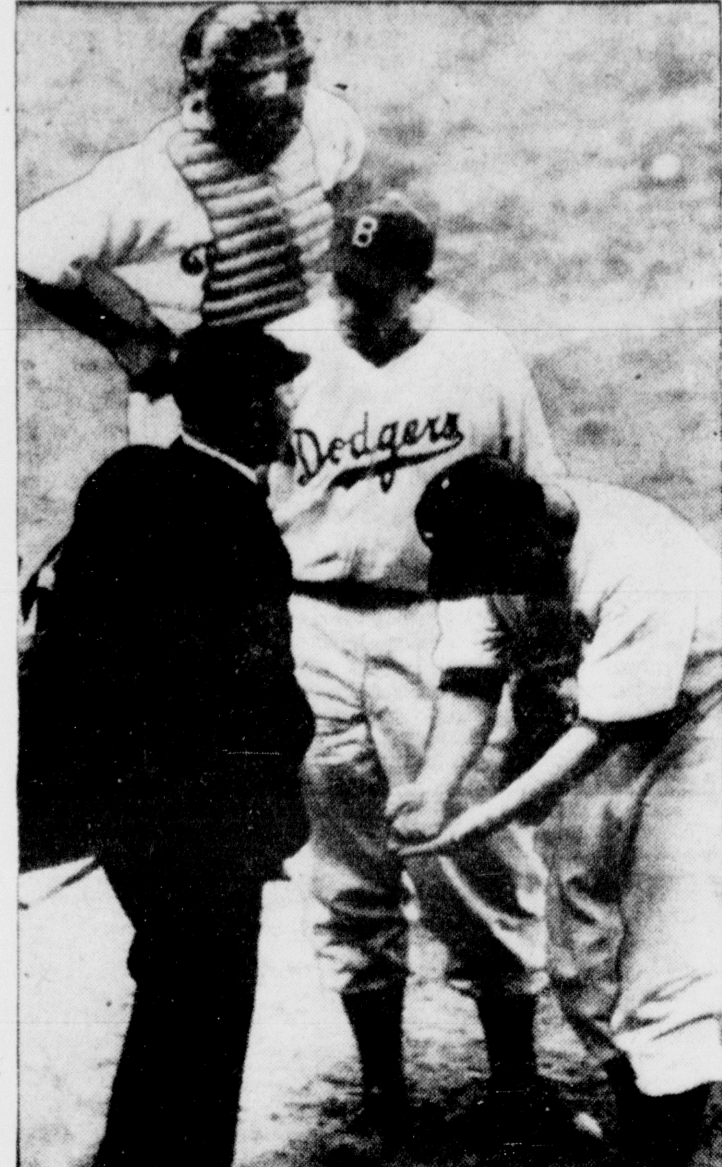

Pos. WILLIAMSPORT: REAR: Paughner, Knepp, RFB: Breverette, Eise, LFB: Breverette, Eise, RFB: Walker, Knierniel, CFB: Zimmerman, Preston, LFB: Bowman, Bittner, RB: Harsh, Skidmore, IR: Castle, Middleton, CF: Bowser, Day, FB: Bowman, Conno, OL: Silvers.

Score by periods: 4-0, 2-0, 6-5. Goals: Williamsport—Harsh, Bowman and Bowser. Beall—Day, Ritchie, Middleton (penalty).

Old Germans To Meet

The Cumberland Old Germans, who bowed to Mt. Savage in the deciding game of the Pen-Mar Base-ball League championship series, will meet tonight at 7 o'clock at Mullin's garage.

DODGERS' PROTEST IS FUTILE

After Whitlow Wyatt pitched a fourth ball to Joe Gordon in the fourth inning of the last World Series game, he rushed to the plate. Wyatt (center) tells Umpire McGowan he's blind as Leo Durocher (right) argues with gestures. Scene was Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. Associated Press Teletext.

The Toughest Schedule

In the middle of a World Series melee and medley there were still more than enough ready to start more football arguments than a hundred tongues could settle. These came from football writers collected from every section of the map. One of the favorite debates concerned the toughest football schedule of the year.

My vote goes to Pittsburgh. Here is the Panther hook-up—Purdue, Michigan, Minnesota, Duke, Ohio State, Fordham, Nebraska, Penn State and Carnegie Tech. The last named team is on the off side, but look over those first eight Pittsburgh games.

I can't afford another schedule that calls for such opposition as Pitt must meet from Michigan, Minnesota, Duke, Fordham and Nebraska, without calling on the others, which are none too soft.

Another Entry

Considering the material at hand I'd say a good runner-up would be Dr. Mal Stevens and his group of Violets from N. Y. U. Starting this next Saturday the Violets face Texas A. and M., Syracuse, Holy Cross, Penn State, Missouri, Tulane and Fordham. Tulane and Fordham alone would make a hand schedule for any normal squad.

This menu is entirely too much for the material Mal Stevens has at hand. From now on it would be a fine day's work for N. Y. U. to beat anyone of these opposing outfits.

Bowl Scouts Busy

The rush for bowl selections is already warming up and the rivalry is keener than ever. Eight leading teams are needed for Pasadena, Dallas, New Orleans and Miami, and they all want the best.

The Pacific Coast always has one fixed starter—her own conference champion. But the western delay in waiting for the final game may cause trouble again, as so many

Cochrane Gives Jenkins Beating

Welter Champion Floors Lightweight Titleholder Five Times

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—In a fight as lopsided as a dollar bill after a rainstorm, Welterweight Champion Red Cochrane chased Lightweight Boss Lew Jenkins all over the ring tonight, felled him five times and easily won a ten-round decision in their non-title tussle in Madison Square Garden. Cochrane weighed 141½; Jenkins 135.

Jenkins didn't bring his motorcycle into the ring with him, but he never could have gone in reverse on it as fast or as far as he back-pedaled all over the place tonight from start to finish against the charge of the bull-necked little red-head.

Looking scared and about as strong as a five-year old child with a heavy cold, the 135-pounder didn't throw more than ten punches throughout the ten rounds and a good sized crowd in this big Eighth avenue sports arena jeered him in sounds all the way from laughs and whistles to boos that shook the rafters.

Jenkins won only one round—the third—and that one was awarded to him on a foul by Referee Billy Cavanaugh when Red was charged with low punching.

Series Records Broken; Gordon Ties Swat Mark

DiMaggio Duplicates 1937 Feat of Nineteen Putouts

BROOKLYN, Oct. 6 (AP)—The airtight World Series just concluded by the Dodgers and Yankees produced numerous records. Here are some of the most important (all based on a five-game series):

Joe Gordon's 500 batting average for seven hits in fourteen times at bat tied the best previous batting mark.

Joe DiMaggio's nineteen putouts topped the record of eighteen set by Mike Donlin of the Giants in 1905 and tied by DiMaggio himself in 1937.

DiMaggio's nineteen feinting chances tied Donlin's mark of 1905. Dolph Camilli's five assists tied record set by Claude Rossman, Detroit, 1908.

Charley Keller's four hits in Sunday's game tied record for most hits in one game.

John Sturm hitting in every game tied record.

Hugh Casey's two defeats in successive games was a new record.

Brooklyn's nineteen singles set record for fewest one-base hits, one less than Athletics made in 1905.

Brooklyn's no stolen bases tied record.

Brooklyn and New York, neither making a sacrifice during the series, set record for two clubs in series and tied one-club mark of Giants in 1937.

New York's forty-two left on bases was three more than record thirty-nine of Giants in 1933.

New York's twenty-three bases on balls was two more than record of 1937 Yankees.

Brooklyn and New York's combined total of thirty-seven bases on balls topped record of thirty-five of Cubs and Athletics in 1929.

Joe Gordon's seven bases on balls tied record set by Jimmy Sheppard of Cubs in 1910 and tied by Mickey Cochrane of Athletics in 1929.

Connecticut Orders Wright's Suspension

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 5 (AP)—State Athletic Commissioner Frank S. Coskey today ordered the suspension of Chaiky Wright, featherweight champion (New York and Maryland version), and his manager after upholding a claim that they "ran out" on a contract.

In a stormy hearing here, Promoter Lou Viscusi and Al Weil, manager of Joey Archibald, of Providence, R. I., from whom Wright recently won the title, claimed that Walker had signed a contract for Wright to meet Bobby (Poison) Ivy, of Hartford.

Walker asserted, however, that the contract was "made under duress," and that he had to sign it "so my fighter could get a crack at Archibald."

grounder to Coscarart who threw to Camilli for the putout. With the count three and two on Rolfe, the attention of the fans and players suddenly was attracted to left field where a piece of bunting draped over the railing in the upper deck of the stands caught fire and fell blazing to the ground. Rolfe fouled off a pitch and raised a short fly which Reese took near the left field foul line. Henrich fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Dodgers—On the first pitch Reese raised a pop fly to Sturm back of first. Owen also hit the first pitch and grounded out to Rizzuto. Galan, a left-handed swinger, batted for Coscarart. On the first pitch Galan popped foul to Sturm just a step away from first base. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

EIGHTH INNING

Yankees—Herman went to second base for the Dodgers and received an ovation from the crowd. DiMaggio was booed as he came to bat. After getting the count to two and two and fouling a couple of pitches, DiMaggio singled sharply to center for his first hit. Keller hit a hot grounder to Herman who wheeled to start a fast double play.

Herman to Reese to Camilli. On the first pitch, Dickey grounded out Herman to Camilli. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Dodgers—Wyatt slapped a hot grounder to Gordon back of second. The ball took a sudden hop but Gordon managed to throw to Sturm in time for the putout. Walker ripped a ground single between Sturm and Gordon. Riggs in the first base coaching box. Reese fanned. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

NINTH INNING

Yankees—Gordon grounded to Riggs and was thrown out. Rizzuto struck out for Wyatt's eighth fanning victim. Bonham again struck out. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Dodgers—Paid attendance was announced as 34,072, the biggest turnout of the three games in Brooklyn, contributing total receipts for the day of $161,941. Camilli lined to Rizzuto. Medwick fouled to Rolfe. Wassell batted for Reese. Wassell flied to DiMaggio. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Only twenty-seven Baltimore and Washington women took off for the opening of the tournament at the Baltimore country club's Five Farms course.

Another Washington woman Mrs. Myron Davis was close behind the medalist with 39-43-82. Mrs. Davis won the Ralph W. Payne trophy tournament here last week.

Pressbox Notes On World Series

By SID FEDER

EBBETS FIELD, BROOKLYN, Oct. 6 (AP)—Well, folks the Bombers beat the Bums and now all the baseball writers have to do is find their way out of Brooklyn before the start of the 1942 season.

The only surprised man around here was the guy in the garage across the street from the ball park who found he could charge you two bucks to park your car—and get away with it.

It's all over but the shooting. That'll come when some of the boys take a look at their contracts for next year.

Before the game Wyatt told sports writers, "I never feel good on the day I pitch." He felt a lot worse as the afternoon wore on.

Lefty Gomez, who was relieved by Johnny Murphy in his last five starts of the regular season, was asked if he'd be ready to go if called upon. "Don't ask me," cracked El Gooto. "Ask Murphy."

It was a walk, single wild pitch for the Yankees' first run in the second. What Power!

The boys in front boxes in the upper stands along the right field line were making such neat catches of foul balls McCarthy and Durocher sent scouts to sign them up.

Owen came to bat in the second inning for the first time since he opened the gates to the Yanks yesterday and the fans gave him the biggest cheer of the series. It could only happen in Brooklyn.

A fire started under the roof of the auxiliary press box in the second frame, and the sports writers forgot all about the ball game.

Wyatt led off the third with a bombing double. Since when are pitchers supposed to do that? Better not let the union hear about it. What.

The Bums were banging Bonham solidly right from the start, but were hitting right at the fielders. That's like the fellow who was trying to escape from Sing Sing and dug a tunnel right into the wardens' parlor.

When Dimas took his position in center field after the squabble, some irate Brooklyn citizen threw an orange at him from the stands. Joe wondered why eggs, toast and coffee didn't follow, so he could have had his breakfast right there.

Terps Preparing For Duke Battle

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Oct. 6 (AP)—Bob James, University of Maryland's sophomore left end, and two reserves, Center Jim Wharton and Guard Hal Berry, were missing from practice today as the Terrapins got down to work for their Saturday game against Duke in Baltimore.

James was the only immediate casualty in the Western Maryland tilt Friday night, suffering a sprained ankle, but it later developed that Wharton and Berry received bad bruises. Berry and Wharton, who shared center duties with George Jarmoska, are letterman.

However, all should be back in practice by Wednesday or Thursday and Terp coaches hope they will be available for duty against the Blue Devils.

Scoring plays were stressed in a light practice session today. Maryland, in defeating Hampden-Sydney 18-0 and tying Western Maryland 6-6, gained more than 700 yards. Nearly half of this yardage was rolled up against the Terrapins, with a lone touchdown to show for the evening's work.

Mearle DuVal, senior quarterback who is battling for a chance to get back into the starting role, looked impressive against Western Maryland in engineering the scoring drive that gave Maryland its touchdown in the final five minutes.

In contrast to the two previous occasions when the Terps' offensive flopped inside the Green Terror five yard line, DuVal pulled a scoring play from the bag on first down and sent Fullback Jack Wright across the goal.

Mrs. Pray Medalist In Mid-Atlantic Golf

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6 (AP)—Leading a small but select field, Mrs. L. G. Pray of Washington's major country club won medal honors with a card of 40-40-80 in the eighteen-hole qualifying round of the women's Middle Atlantic Golf Association championship today.

Only twenty-seven Baltimore and Washington women took off for the opening of the tournament at the Baltimore country club's Five Farms course.

Experts Slated To Launch Probe Of Blast Cause

Explosives Authority Here; Bureau of Mines Head Expected Today

An exhaustive investigation of Thursday's tragic explosion on North Centre street, which claimed two lives, injured more than a score and caused damage estimated to exceed $100,000, is scheduled to be opened today.

Dr. Wilbert J. Huff, nationally-known authority on explosives, arrived here late yesterday afternoon, and Dr. J. J. Rutledge, head of the Maryland Bureau of Mines, is expected to be here today to assist city officials in determining the cause of the terrific blast which demolished two buildings and wrecked adjacent structures.

Governor Offers Aid

These experts were asked to head the investigation following a telephone conversation yesterday morning between Mayor Harry Irvine and Governor Herbert P. O'Connor. The state's chief executive offered the services of Dr. Huff and Dr. Rutledge to the city.

Mayor Irvine's telephone conference with the governor came after city council passed an order authorizing him to secure the services of experts "to investigate the origin and cause of the explosion." The probe is designed to provide information looking to the prevention of similar catastrophes in the future.

Dr. Huff, head of the department of chemical engineering and director of the engineering experiment station at the University of Maryland, conferred last night with city officials and other interested persons at the Fort Cumberland hotel. It was understood he wanted to get a preliminary report on the disaster, one of the worst in the city's history, before launching with Dr. Rutledge a thorough probe this morning.

To Interview Witnesses

In addition to carefully inspecting the scene, he is scheduled to interview occupants of the blast-riddled buildings and other eyewitnesses to the explosion.

Dr. Rutledge had not arrived here last night, but it was expected that he would be here today, although no definite information was available.

Dr. Huff, who has been connected with the University of Maryland since 1937, has had a wide and varied experience in engineering work pertaining to explosives and has won a nation-wide reputation in this field as a result of his work and researches.

Began Career in 1917

According to "Who's Who in America," Dr. Huff began his career with a research laboratory in New York in 1917. After serving as a lieutenant in the chemical warfare service during World War I, he became a research chemist in the United States Bureau of Mines, then was placed in charge of the research division of the Koppers Company laboratories in Pittsburgh, which post he held from 1920 to 1924. During this same period he was a fellow in the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research.

From 1924 to 1937, he was professor of gas engineering at Johns Hopkins university, becoming affiliated in 1937 with the University of Maryland. Since 1935, he has been chief chemist of the explosives.

City Council Cannot Sign Contract With Labor Union, Officials Say

Action on Labor Report Is Postponed until Next Meeting

Heads of two city departments declared yesterday they find no valid labor agreement as such may be entered into by the mayor and city council of Cumberland with a labor union, but submitted to the council an eight-point program on wages and working conditions for employees of the city's water and streets department.

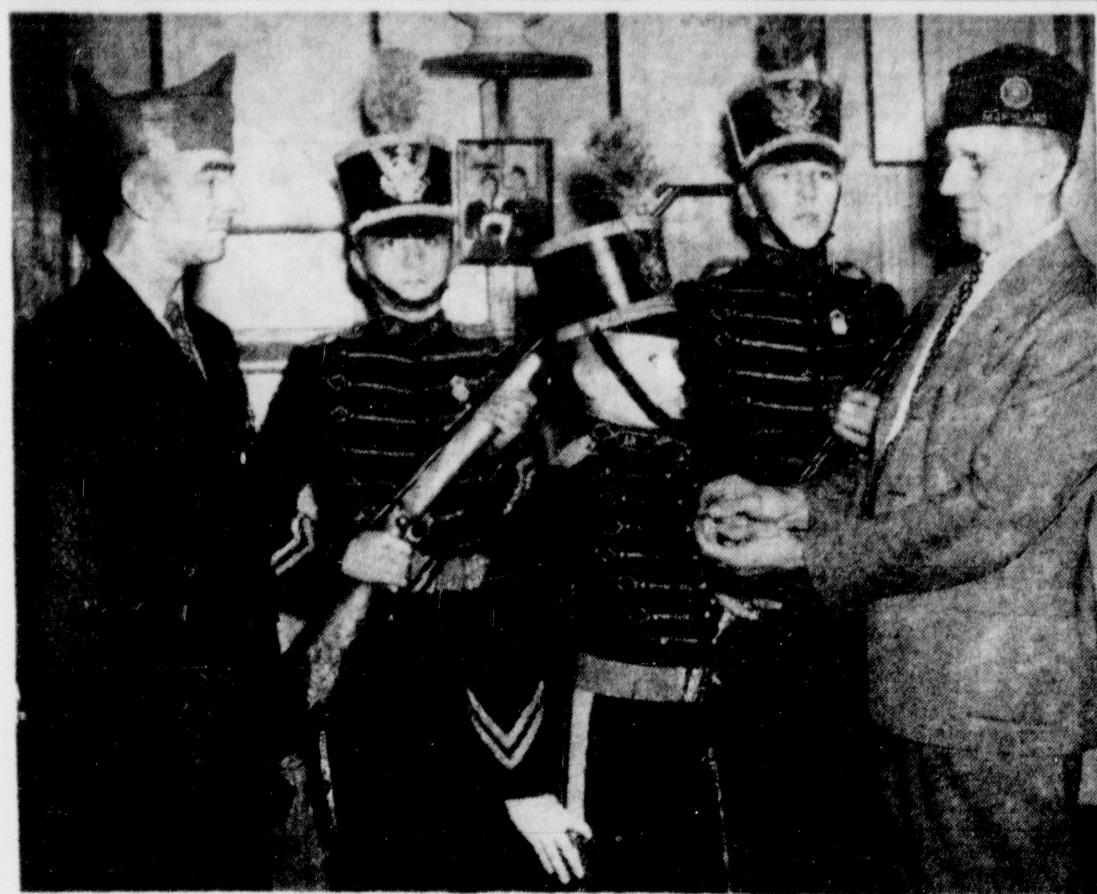

Action on the program was postponed until next week, meanwhile, Commissioner Edgar Reynolds and William J. Edwards will attempt to arrange a meeting of employees and council Thursday.

Wage Scale Maintained

The proposed program retained the current wage scale and it was indicated the men apparently were willing to settle on that basis.

Gunther To Attend Medical Meeting

Public Health Laboratories Sessions Scheduled Today in Baltimore

W. Arnold Gunther, bacteriologist of the Cumberland Health Department, will attend the luncheon and symposium of the Maryland Association of Medical and Public Health Laboratories today at Mercy hospital, Baltimore.

The guest speaker at the luncheon, scheduled for 12 o'clock noon, will be Dr. Victor Najjar, instructor in pediatrics at Harriet Lane Home, Johns Hopkins hospital, who will speak on "Riboflavin in Human Nutrition."

Following the business session at 1:30 p. m., there will be talks by Dr. Howard, associate in anatomy, Johns Hopkins Medical School, on "Observations on Behavior of Poliomyelitis Virus in Primates;" Dr. John Henderson, associate director of the Sharp and Dohme Medical Research Division, on "Lysoc Normal Human Plasma;" and Dr. Charles Bramble, biochemist, Mercy hospital, instructor in zoology at Johns Hopkins university, who will speak on "Laboratory Procedures with Vitamin A Therapy Demonstration."

Three towers are already open in Garrett county, including those atop Negro mountain, near Grantsville; High Rock, near Westernport; and Snaggy mountain, near Swallow Falls, and others will be put in operation as the need arises.

The towers have been opened this year much earlier than usual on account of the fire hazard, the forester pointed out.

Meanwhile, the fire danger in other Maryland forests and towns mounted as a burning sun seared the parched state in 90-degree heat for the third successive day, the Associated Press reported.

3 Blast Victims Leave Hospitals

Three more persons injured in the explosion which rocked downtown Cumberland Thursday were discharged yesterday from hospitals as plans were made for the funerals today of two others fatally injured in the blast.

Funeral services for Miss Matilda Kenny, of 7 Market street, seamstress at the Heinrich and Jenkins haberdashery, which was wrecked by the North Centre street blast, and for Dr. John A. Christ, occupant of an office above the store, will be held within an hour of each other at St. Patrick's church this morning.

Miss Kenny died Saturday morning at Allegany hospital, while Dr. Christ died Saturday night, also at Allegany.

Yesterday, Dr. Bertha Johnson, 25, daughter of Dr. Christ, and William Spitznas, 41, of Romney, W. Va., were discharged from Allegany hospital and W. Lester Heinrich, 40, of 309 Franklin street, from Memorial. It was said, however, that Dr. Bertha Johnson may return for further treatment after her father's funeral.

Other victims of the explosion, the cause of which will be probed today by experts, were described as "improving" or "satisfactory" by hospital attendants.

USO CAMPAIGN HERE WILL CLOSE FRIDAY; FUND NEARS $11,500

The United Service Organization campaign in Allegany county will be concluded Friday, October 10, it was announced by Thomas F. Conlon, chairman. Conlon said that $11,462 of the county's quota of $11,500 already has been raised and added that he is hopeful that the remaining $38 will be contributed by Friday evening.

The Christopher Columbus Society sent in a donation of $10 yesterday and twenty-three individuals contributed $1 each in the past week.

Conlon pointed out that the greatest amount of money was contributed to the fund in July and August. The campaign was inaugurated late in June.

Those desiring to contribute to put the drive "over the top" by Friday are requested to bring their donations to Room 18, Liberty Trust building.

Prizes Announced For Hallowe'en Parade Oct. 31

12 Awards Designated for Mummies; Service Clubs To Name Judges

Approximately $250 in cash awards will be presented to groups and individuals in the second annual Hallowe'en celebration parade to be staged here Friday, October 31, at 8 p. m., it was announced last night at a meeting of representatives of Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars; the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce and the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce, in the Liberty Trust building.

Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and publicity chairman for the celebration, said that the prizes will be limited to local groups and individuals and invitations will be sent out this week.

Each musical organization entering the parade will receive $25, provided there are at least twenty-four active instruments in the line of march.

Prizes For Mummies

A total of $54 in cash awards will be awarded the mummies who will be divided into three groups with four awards designated for each group. The prizes for the most original costumes, the most comic costume and the most artistic costumes will be $7, $5, $4 and $2 in each group.

Arrangements for the parade will be in charge of Thomas F. Conlon, marshal. The parade will form on Cumberland street near the Algonquin hotel and the route will be Baltimore street to South George street to Salem street at the state armory. Prize winners will be announced at the Hallowe'en dance in the armory. George Miller, of the local V. F. W. post, is chairman of the dance committee.

George Schwarzenbach, of the chamber of commerce, and John McAlpine, of the junior association of commerce, comprise the finance committee for the celebration.

Four Cumberland service clubs, namely, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Exchange, will be asked to designate two judges each to select prize winners in the parade.

Eight Judges Sought

William L. Henderson Will Become Head of Tax Commission Today

Will Ask Board of Public Works for Funds To Enlarge Force

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6 (AP)—William L. Henderson will be sworn in as chairman of the state tax commission tomorrow morning and go immediately to Annapolis to ask the board of public works that funds be provided for enlarging the commission force to handle increased work.

Henderson, deputy attorney general for ten years, was appointed to the post vacated by Harry O. Levin last week. "The resignation of Dr. Thomas Koon of Cumberland from the commission cleared the way for Henderson's appointment and leaves a further commission vacancy to which Governor O'Connor is required by law to appoint a Western Maryland Republican."

O'Connor, announced that Henderson would be sworn in tomorrow, said he was accepting Dr. Koon's previously-tendered resignation as of today. Dr. Koon will be appointed to the state industrial accident commission in about a month when the term of Frederick Atkins expires, O'Connor added.

Attorney General William C. Walsh has not made public his choice as Henderson's successor in the law department.

Henderson said the tax commission would need at least six men, one of whom will replace Michael J. Lindsay, chief supervisor of assessments, who plans to retire within thirty days to take advantage of the pension available to him under the new merit system retirement plan.

Lindsay acts as liaison man between the counties and the state. Two additional experts will be needed to handle work given the commission by the last legislature. Also required will be at least one clerk and two stenographers, Henderson said.

"The prospect of increased revenues to the state from new laws affecting foreign corporations, including utilities, justifies the increase in personnel," Henderson asserted, adding that changes must be made

Jaycee Directors Vote To Sponsor Daring Bureau

Service To Be Inaugurated To Avoid Conflicts of Important Events

Directors of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce last night voted to sponsor a central activities dating bureau which will be open to all organizations and desiring to use the service.

The purpose of the service is to avoid a conflict in dates of their various activities. On numerous occasions, it was pointed out, several important meetings or attractions are scheduled in Cumberland on the same day and the association decided to take steps to avoid this confusion by sponsoring the dating bureau.

John McAlpine, president, stated that many cities have a similar setup and it works to the advantage of all those who desire to cooperate in the matter.

Those desiring to co-operate are advised to contact the office of the junior association in the Liberty Trust building or call telephone 28.

Petrot to Speak

It was announced that officers of the Maryland State Guard companies here and members of the association enlisted in the state guard are being forwarded invitations to attend the monthly dinner meeting of the association, scheduled for Thursday, October 16, at 6:30 p. m., in the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, Baltimore pike. Adjutant General Francis A. Petrot, of Annapolis, will be the guest speaker.

The local association will co-operate with the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce in the staging of the second annual Hallowe'en parade and dance here Friday, October 31.

New Members Join

New members admitted last evening were Frank A. Martin, president of Martin's, Inc.; John Lewis Simpson, Western Maryland Railway Company employee, and G. Byron Knight, assistant manager of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation.

The association now has 130 members, including approximately twenty in military service.

Local Police Are Asked To Find Kin Of Sadie Hall

Police authorities here are attempting, at the request of Washington, D. C., authorities, to locate relatives of Sadie Hall, a native of this city, who died yesterday in Washington.

The telegram received by police here reads:

"Sadie Hall, white, 35, dead here has relatives your city named Culp. Clerk of court here knows family. Locate and notify, advise."

Richard H. Mansfield, chief of detectives.

W. B. Lovenstein, desk sergeant, said he had contacted Robert Jackson, clerk of the circuit court, but that Jackson was unable to give the desired information.

At the request of police, a call was broadcast over WTBO last evening.

Anyone knowing anything of the whereabouts of the Culp family is requested to notify local police.
